CHOICE OF F.D.R. LOSES 1ST TEST FOR JONES POST

Senators Approve Separate RFC.

BY PHILIP DODD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26.—The senate commerce committee today dealt a stinging rebuff to President Roosevelt when it turned thumbs down on Henry Wallace, the President's choice for secretary of commerce. By a 14 to 5 vote, it decided against sending the former Vice President's name to the senate with a favorable report.

The committee's action followed its decision to report favorably a joint resolution which would divorce the 40 billion dollar Reconstruction Finance corporation and its allied agencies from the department of commerce. It added an amendment which would prevent the President from transferring the lending agency back to the department of commerce, or to any other branch of government.

Both committee actions will be reported to the senate Monday, Sen. Bailey [D., N. C.], commerce committee chairman, told reporters, but he was not certain when the senate would act on either matter.

Action Up to Leaders.

He may move to take up the RFC divorcement resolution immediately, he said, but added it is up to "the leadership" to decide when the Wallace nomination is to be considered.

Administration critics tonight were planning their strategy to bring an early vote on the Wallace nomination, in the belief there will be more chance of defeating Wallace before the divorcement resolution—introduced by Chairman George [D., Ga.] of the senate finance committee—is voted upon.

If the George resolution is made law, the secretary of commerce would be stripped of his power over the federal lending agencies.

Limited Job Remains.

Even Jesse Jones, asked last week by the President to quit as commerce secretary to make room for Wallace, believes Wallace could handle the commerce secretary's job in that event, he told the commerce committee Tuesday.

Anti-Wallace forces believe they can muster 48 to 50 votes against the Wallace nomination if it is brought up for final action before

State's Atty. Tuohy yesterday started what he said would be a complete investigation of the tax reduction obtained last year by Secretary of the Interior [Honest Harold] Ickes on a five story building which he owns at 231-33 S. State st.

Assessor Clark.

The inquiry was prompted by charges made by County Assessor Clark that Ickes had won the reduction by filing a false affidavit with the board of tax appeals.

Denies Making Affidavit.

Other developments of the day were:

1. In Washington, D. C., Secretary Ickes issued a statement asserting that "never, to my knowledge, did I at any time make an affidavit to the board of tax appeals," charging a smear plot against him, and attacking THE TRIBUNE and its editor and publisher, Col. Robert R. McCormick, for printing the story. Other newspapers, including New Deal organs, also had printed the story.

2. Also in Washington, Mrs. Marian W. McCeney, a notary public who attested to the disputed appeals board affidavit last June 8, challenged Ickes' assertion that he never had made such a document. She had notarized many statements for Ickes, she said. She added that if Assessor Clark has an affidavit properly signed and notarized by her, "then there should be no dispute as to whether Mr. Ickes signed and filed that affidavit."

Statement by Col. McCormick.

3. In Chicago, Col. McCormick, replying to Ickes' attack on THE TRIBUNE, said: "He apparently has been caught in a criminal act, and I am not going to let him avoid the consequences of it by dragging my name into it."

4. Leasing, rental, and other operations of Ickes' 231-33 S. State st. building were revealed, in part by his Washington statement. One salient point brought out was, in essence, that Ickes took money from one pocket and put it into another, then claimed an operating loss from the first pocket.

Acts to Recover Loss in Taxes.

Immediately after learning of Assessor Clark's fraud charge against "Honest Harold," Tuohy assigned Gordon Nash, an ace assistant, to make a complete inquiry into tax matters on all Ickes properties in the county. Tuohy also assigned Jacob Shamberg, another top aid, to

White House Got Dog Ride, Says ATC Aid

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26 (AP).—An air transport command officer—fully qualified to know what went on—today told to a reporter the following story of how Col. Elliott Roosevelt's dog, "Blaze," got the airplane ride to the west coast that caused three service men to be ejected from the plane and created a national furore.

"It was like this," said the officer. "The White House called the air transport command and said they wanted this dog shipped west.

Says No Priority Requested.

"What would you do—even a civilian—if the White House said they wanted something? You'd give it to them."

He added that the White House did not ask for a priority.

The ATC officer said service men are not supposed to be on ATC planes at all, and when they are given free rides they know they are on "D" priority, behind any freight that goes abroad.

He said that after the dog got on the plane as freight, it was decided the thing to do was route it on thru and "get rid of it as quickly as possible."

That Name Does It.

The ATC made one mistake, the officer said—when somebody put a tag on the crate reading "Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt."

At the time the dog ride burst into national prominence—on Jan. 11—Stephen Early, White House press secretary, said that neither Col. Roosevelt nor anybody in the White House, had anything to do with getting a priority for "Blaze."

GEN. MacARTHUR TOURS FRONT ON 65TH BIRTHDAY

MacARTHUR'S HDQ., Luzon, Jan. 26 (AP).—Greeted by columns of doughboys moving up to the front, Gen. MacArthur celebrated his 65th birthday today by touring the fighting scene around Bamban. He watched American and Japanese artillery duel over the Clark field air center.

Gen. MacArthur was accompanied by his aides, Colonels Lloyd Lehrbas and Roger Egebert, and his military secretary, Brig. Gen. Bonner Fellers. MacArthur caught the eye of many Yanks moving down to the Bamban area.

JAP ARTILLERY SHELLS YANKS ON CLARK FIELD

BULLETIN.

MacARTHUR'S HDQ., Luzon, Jan. 27 [Saturday]—(AP).—Japanese forces on Luzon showed their first signs of a fight in the central plains sector south of the Bamban river Friday, and their artillery also opened up on American seized Clark field.

The 14th corps, whose spearheads yesterday were reported to be at Angeles, 40 airline miles from Manila, got its first real taste of organized opposition after easily passing two natural enemy defense lines—along the Agno and the Bamban.

Artillery in Caves.

George Thomas Folster, NBC reporter, said the enemy fire against Clark field was coming from guns placed in caves facing south toward the field. Folster speculated this was additional proof that the Japanese had expected Luzon to be invaded at Batangas, south of Manila, instead of at Lingayen. Thus the enemy must let the Americans go on by before they can get such guns to work.

Today's bulletin reported no sizable gains anywhere on Luzon as the enemy maintained his resistance against the United States 1st army corps on the left flank. This resistance has been almost constant since the Jan. 9 invasion.

What few gains were chalked up took place in the Rosario area in the northeast sector, where the Japanese have made such good use of ridge terrain that it has been necessary for guns of American warships in Lingayen gulf to support the 158th regimental combat team and 43d division.

Yanks Win Town.

In that sector the Yanks captured the town of Caurigan, north of Sison, which is in American hands.

Troops pushing thru San Manuel, father east in Pangasinan province, against stubborn resistance destroyed 10 enemy tanks east and north of the town, the bulletin said.

American planes bombed Subic bay and Bataan peninsula, wrecking many coastal positions. United States aircraft swept the enemy highways in the Manila area.

A 1,000 ton freighter was sunk and three others damaged in a new strike at Formosa. The waterfront at Amoy, China, was bombed.

BY ROBERT CROMIE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE 80TH INFANTRY DIVISION, Jan. 26—Sgt. William Donald Royce of Chicago will soon be on his way home, and may arrive just in time to find himself drafted. If so, he probably will be the only draftee in this war already with two years' service, entitled to wear the Purple Heart and the bronze star.

This may sound confusing, but Sgt. Royce is being released from the army because he won't be 18 and draft eligible until March. By a little exaggeration about his age, he enlisted in September, 1942, when he was only 15, after, as he says, "wearing my folks down by nagging" until they gave their consent.

He's A Tank Commander.

Young Royce became a member of the 702d tank battalion of the 80th division, which entered combat in August of last year. By this time, the youngster was such an excellent soldier he was named a tank commander.

His first tank—called Daredevil—was knocked out by German artillery near Argentan. Royce rescued one member of his crew from the blazing Sherman, and was given the 702d battalion's first battle decoration—the bronze star for heroism.

Then he got a new tank and a new crew—a crew which he says were "good kids" despite the fact his bow gunner was almost 15 years older than Tank Commander Royce.

Gets Time to Think.

Sgt. Royce's tank was among the first across the Moselle river during the struggle for Faiquemont, in the heart of the coal region, but his tank was hit twice and the young sergeant was wounded by shrapnel and sent to a hospital.

"I had lots of time to think in the hospital," he says. "Commanding a tank is a lot of responsibility. You've got to make up your mind about a lot of stuff that could get another guy hurt or even killed. Then they'd find out you were just a dumb kid who didn't know any better and had no business being there in the first place."

After a checkup proved Sgt. Royce was only 17, the war department ordered his release, so he soon will be heading toward Chicago for a well earned rest.

U. S. BLUFF WINS GATE TO RUHR, SAVES 350 YANKS

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 9TH ARMY, Jan. 26.—When the 9th army pushed up to the gateway to the Ruhr valley today and helped to oust the Germans from Siegfried line positions west of the Roer river, it illustrated the frugality with which the American army spends lives for a military objective.

The advance was achieved bloodlessly, altho a solution of the military problem with lesser regard for life might have cost 350 casualties.

The British 2d army also was involved in the task for wiping off a German salient and advancing to the Roer. To straighten the line, the operation might have been followed by an American attack to move its line forward in conjunction with the British and eliminate a triangular area where the Nazis had a bridgehead west of the river.

The operation might well have involved three battalions, and so, on the basis of war department estimates of 12 per cent casualties among participants, the number of dead and wounded might have approximated 350.

96 Pillboxes in Path.

Gen. Alvan Gillem, commanded the corps whose United States 102d division was earmarked for the operation.

Gillem foresaw that if the British succeeded on his flank the Germans would be in an untenable position, but he realized the Nazis might determine to sell every acre of terrain at the highest cost. He delayed, therefore, an order to attack until the British advance had isolated the enemy bridgehead. Even then he didn't order an attack because machine guns employed in 96 pillboxes were capable of keeping the casualties up. Gillem didn't want 350 families in America to receive telegrams reporting casualties.

He gave the Nazis, therefore, a dress rehearsal of what he intended to do. On Wednesday he laid down a smoke barrage blinding the pillboxes for hours. Then he laid down a bombardment by heavy artillery that churned up the German billeting area in Brachelen into rubble. Then he had the tactical air force dig yawning craters in the highways and crossroads in the enemy's assembly area. Finally he sent white clad raiding parties across the snow covered No Man's land to check up every opposing unit.

That's Enough for Germans.

The first intimation that Gillem had bluffed Field Marshal Von Rundstedt out was had yesterday when observation posts saw the Germans blowing the bridges across the Roer. Heavy explosions later indicated they were blowing up their ammunition dumps.

And last night, when the 102d's patrols, raiders, and combat teams burst into the German trenches they found the enemy had fled.

We now occupy the entire area overlooking the bare, untenable Roer valley with the line straightened in conformity with the British and the bridgehead west of the river extinguished—and it didn't cost one casualty.

The operation probably won't be mentioned in a headquarters bulletin and the 102d's success won't win citations, and maybe Gillem won't get complimented. But that is how Uncle Sam's high command respects the value of G. I. lives.

MESSAGES FROM YANKS.

Messages from Chicagoland Yanks abroad to their home folks appear on page 5. They were cabled or wirelessed to Chicago by Tribune war correspondents. This is a new Tribune feature which will be published on Saturdays.

DRIVE WITHIN EIGHT MILES OF KOENIGSBERG

Hammer Closer to Rim of Breslau.

LONDON, Jan. 27 [Saturday]—(AP).—The Russian drives yesterday rolled on unchecked thru the big industrial city of Hindenburg in Silesia, reached the Danzig Free State frontier, and cut off East Prussia with a thrust to the Baltic coast.

From 20 to 25 Nazi divisions—perhaps 200,000 Germans—now are trapped in East Prussia.

Outflanking Poznan, big Polish stronghold, the Russians also crossed the Warta river 10 miles south of the city and speared to within 136 miles of Berlin with the capture of Mosina. This was the closest approach to the reich capital yet announced by the soviet command. The Germans said the forces beyond Poznan had stabbed close to the Brandenburg frontier whose nearest point to Berlin is 91 miles due east.

Win Town North of Poznan.

North of Poznan the Russians took Rogozno, only 20 miles from the German frontier and 140 miles northeast of Berlin; other units striking toward Berlin from the southeast in Silesia were 143 miles away.

On the 15th day of their powerful winter offensive the Russians were reported to have driven closer to the rim of besieged Breslau, Silesian capital, to have crossed the upper Oder river defense line and broken into Brieg, on the west bank 22 miles to the southeast, and to have fought their way into Beuthen, five miles east of fallen Hindenburg, whose normal population is 126,000. Hindenburg is the largest Silesian city yet captured by the Russians.

Moscow radio said that Breslau, Germany's eighth city and the greater reich's ninth, had been "isolated" with the Russians cutting all direct communications into it, and also said that the Oder river had been crossed at several points.

In Silesia Marshal Konev's 1st Ukraine army took Herrnstadt, 32 miles northwest of Breslau and 15 miles northeast of Steinau. Winzig, nine miles northeast of Steinau, also was taken in a 12 mile advance in two days, as was Stroppen, 16 miles east of Steinau, and Trebnitz, 11 miles north of Breslau.

Reach Bromberg Canal.

Berlin said Russian troops in northern Poland had crossed the Bromberg canal west of Bydgoszcz [Bromberg]. This indicated that Marshal Zhukov's 1st White Russian army units now were sweeping northward into the Polish corridor to widen the salient between the German homeland and the cut-off Junkers province of East Prussia.

Torun [Thorn], Vistula river stronghold 24 miles southeast of Bydgoszcz, was surrounded, Berlin said. The Russians announced that they were two miles from the town.

The east bank Vistula river communication centers of Chelmno, Grudziadz, and Marienwerder to the north were being attacked as the Russians hurled the enemy back against the river and sought to break into the Polish corridor from the east. Moscow's 224 guns fired victory salvos for these new gains.

It was Marshal Rokossovsky's 2d White Russian army which broke thru to the Danzig border and the Baltic coast to encircle East Prussia and threaten Koenigsberg, its capital, from the rear. The Russians were eight miles from the city.

Reds Capture Marienburg.

One Russian spearhead captured the key rail town of Marienburg, on the Nogat river border of Danzig territory, 24 miles southeast of the city and port of Danzig. Another, in a 14 mile advance north of Briensdorf, taken Thursday, occupied Tolkemit on the coast 28 miles northeast of Marienburg.

Tolkemit is on the Frisches Haff, or Baltic lagoon, a five mile wide bay sheltered by a mile wide strip

Nazis Lose 381,330 Men, Say Reds

LONDON, Jan. 26 (AP).—The Russian offensive cost the Germans 381,330 men killed and captured—295,000 of them killed—during its first 12 days ending Jan. 24, a special announcement from Moscow by the soviet information bureau said tonight.

The 1st White Russian front accounted for 80,000 killed, 37,700 captured; 2d White Russian front, 65,000 killed, 5,530 captured; 3d White Russian front, 60,000 killed, 4,000 captured; 1st Ukrainian front, 70,000 killed, 31,900 captured, and 4th Ukrainian front, 20,000 killed, 7,200 captured.

Other German losses for the same 12-day period were 592 planes, 2,995 tanks and self-propelled guns, 7,932 guns, 7,386 mortars, 26,019 machine guns, and 34,019 trucks.

The large number of German dead as compared with Germans captured was paralleled by a large percentage of war material destroyed as against the amount captured. Of the 592 Nazi plane losses, the announcement said, 442 were destroyed. Also destroyed were 2,138 tanks and self-propelled guns, 3,490 guns, 2,960 mortars, 9,570 machine guns, and 24,960 trucks.

Among the booty on the five fronts were such items as 29 railway trains loaded with equipment and supplies, 2,478 bicycles, 388 tractors, 134 locomotives, and many hundreds of dumps of ammunition, equipment, and food.

Henry and CIO Celebrate—Too Early!

New York, Jan. 26 [Special].—Former Vice President Wallace's triumphant visit to New York was rudely broken up today by word from Washington that the senate commerce committee had turned down his nomination to be secretary of commerce.

Wallace got the bad news from reporters as he stood among a group of admirers at a reception in his honor in the Hotel Astor.

He seemed stunned. For a long minute he stood, open mouthed, as reporters crowded around him. Then he pulled himself together, mustered a wry grin and said:

"I'd rather not say anything right now, except that I'm sorry they [the committee] did that. It is a great disappointment."

Then he pushed his way thru the group and walked to a window and stood staring down at the street.

Hillman Gets the News.

Nearly as stunned, but much more urbane about it, was Sidney Hillman, president of the CIO's Political Action committee and Wallace's prime supporter for a high place in government.

Hillman shrugged off all questions, and went to Wallace's side.

The bad news couldn't have come more inopportunely for Wallace. He had had a triumphant day. Nearly 1,000 union supporters—both CIO and AFL—had greeted him on his arrival at Pennsylvania station at 1:20 p. m. and the early part of the afternoon had been spent swapping ideas and compliments with Mayor Fiorello La Guardia. Wallace said one purpose of his visit was to pose for a bust by Jo Davidson, sculptor.

From the mayor's office, he had gone directly to the Astor for the reception sponsored by the national business man's committee for Wallace, a new group organized since his nomination was sent to the senate by the President. James McGill, president of McGill Industries of Valparaiso, Ind., is chairman.

Campaign for Wallace.

Union officials claimed that the Pennsylvania station reception was entirely spontaneous, but a surprising number of large lapel cards, bearing the inscription "Wallace for Secretary of Commerce" blossomed on overcoats.

A member of the communist infested CIO national maritime union, who identified himself only as "One Eyed Chips," was on hand to present a silver topped Malacca cane from India to the would-be commerce secretary.

Wallace carried the cane the rest of the afternoon, flourishing it gaily at city hall, where he commented that it was the only cane he'd ever carried.

At city hall Mayor La Guardia remarked that he couldn't go to the reception because he was "a working man." Wallace smiled:

"I'm just one of the unemployed."

Then he went to the Astor—and found out.

of land running from Danzig to the Koenigsberg area. The Russians had cut the last Berlin-Koenigsberg rail links with the plunge into Marienburg and Tolkemit, and Berlin said soviet troops were attacking in the southern part of Elbing, Baltic port midway between the two fallen points.

The towns of Stuhm, seven miles south of Marienburg, and Mulhausen, 11 miles east of Elbing, also were swept up in the encirclement operation.

Nazis Caught in Circular Sack.

German troops in East Prussia now have been caught in a circular sack of about 4,000 square miles, having now lost most of the province.

The fortress capital of Koenigsberg not only was menaced from the rear by Rokossovsky's troops but also by Gen. Cherniakhovsky's 3d White Russian army attacking close to the city from the north, east, and southeast.

Col. Gen. Petrov's 4th Ukraine army, slogging thru the mountains of eastern Slovakia, captured a number of localities, including one 29 miles northwest of Kassa (Kosice).

Inside western Budapest the Russians captured 25 more blocks, and heavy German relief attacks southwest of the Hungarian capital were repulsed.

GERMAN WAR BULLETIN.

The German Friday war bulletin as broadcast from Berlin said:

"In Hungary our troops repelled enemy counter-attacks between Lake Balaton and the Danube in the Vertes and Pilis mountains. The German-Hungarian garrison of Budapest maintained the western part of the city against stubborn Bolshevist day and night attacks.

"Southwest of Gleiwitz a heavy tank battle has flared up. Between Cozel and Breslau our formations frustrated numerous soviet attempts to cross the Oder river. East and northeast of Breslau the enemy fought his way nearer to the defensive belt of the city.

"On both sides of Poznan weaker enemy tank formations pushed west and northwestward. Bitter fighting is taking place for Poznan, Bydgoszcz [Bromberg], and Torun [Thorn].

"East of the lower Vistula river our divisions are engaged in a heavy battle with the enemy attacking on a wide front.

"At the front in East Prussia enemy pressure northeastward continues between Wormditt and Ortelsburg. An enemy attempt to break thru with strong infantry and tank formations across the Pregel and Deime rivers toward Koenigsberg was repelled.

"At the Latvian front renewed bolshevist attempts to break thru toward Liepaja as well as major enemy attacks south of Frauenburg and northwest of Dobele failed."

Russians Roll On in East Prussia and Silesia

LONDON, Jan. 26 (AP).—East Prussia, split from Germany again by the thrust of Marshal Rokossovsky's 2d White Russian army to Danzig bay, has been for centuries a stronghold of the militaristic Junkers.

Won by the swords of Teutonic knights who diverted the left-over zeal of the crusades to a war against the Lithuanians, and held for centuries in feudal pride, it is a province poor in physical resources but rich in historical incidents which feed the German notions of racial superiority.

Half its land is cultivated, half is forest, moor and bog. Exports formerly consisted chiefly of timber and grain. Amber was found in Samland. Fishing is important. Also there is some manufacturing in the larger towns altho there are no great industries. At Koenigsberg there were machine and locomotive works.

Contributed to German Pride.

East Prussia's contributions to the German pride of race are another matter. Marienburg, captured by the Russians, became the seat of the Teutonic order at the start of the 14th century and its great 13th century castle is one of the largest, most picturesque and gloomiest medieval structures in Germany. It was carefully restored a hundred years ago.

Koenigsberg, now threatened by the Red army, grew up around a castle built by the teutonic order and became headquarters of that conquering brotherhood in 1457. The city was a member of the Hanseatic league and the capital of the dukes of Prussia in the 16th century.

Defeat Russians at Tannenberg.

At Tannenberg the Teutonic knights took a terrible beating from the Poles and Lithuanians in 1410 and this rankled in German hearts until Hindenburg and Ludendorff defeated the Russians on the same ground in the greatest German victory of the first World war.

Germany erected a tremendous war memorial at Tannenberg which became Hindenburg's tomb. Now the Germans have removed Hindenburg's body and wrecked the memorial.

The Teutonic order sank to impotence after the 15th century defeat at Tannenberg, but left claims which the electors of Brandenburg and the kings of Prussia turned to their own advantage and bequeathed their tradition of German eastward conquest which still remains the plague of Europe.

TRIBUNE FOR MEN ABROAD PLEASES YANKS IN PACIFIC

Troops Read Edition in Far Places.

BY THOMAS MORROW.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

HONOLULU, T. H., Jan. 25 [Delayed].—The Overseas Tribune, which has just passed its first birthday, has won its way to the far front areas of the Pacific. It has appeared on transport planes flying to forward bases in the Dutch Indies, Guam, Manus, Saipan, Kwajalein, Ulithi, Johnston Island, and Guadalcanal.

The tabloid sized newspaper has traveled in the mail from home, thru pilots who have picked up copies and taken them forward, and now with printing facilities on Luzon and Leyte and a possibility of greater ones in Manila shortly, it will carry the word to even more Chicago service men.

Like a Guy from Home.

"It's just like meeting a guy from home," said Ken Lee, a yeoman who attended the University of Chicago. "It brings back vividly the loop and all the pleasant things I want to remember."

"The only thing wrong with the Overseas Tribune is that I can't get it as often as I like," said Pat Lay, 4509 Emerald av., Chicago, Ill., a private in the army who was wounded at Guadalcanal. He reports that the Overseas Tribune has cheered him ever since he got his first copy.

Brings Only Sports News.

"I eat up the news from home," said Lay. "I catch up with the comics whenever I get a copy. It gives me the only authentic news of the sport world that I get."

The Overseas Tribune has also cheered Gerard Radice, a second lieutenant in the artillery, who lives in Chicago at 1510 S. Millard av., and who is now recuperating in a hospital after being wounded on Leyte Island.

"I eat up the Chicago news," said Radice, "then I read Front Views and Profiles, and Looking in from the Lake, check up on sports and then brush up on the comics."

ASSERTS RUSSIA IGNORED PLEA OF POLISH PATRIOTS

BY JAMES SLOAN.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The people of Poland are afraid of what the future has in store for them under Russian rule, it was disclosed today by a Polish courier who took to Warsaw the code word "Tempest," which set off the ill-fated patriot uprising last August.

"Warsaw doesn't exist any more, and even if the devil were there he couldn't help the people," said Lt. Jan Nowak, 30, who escaped after the capital's capitulation Oct. 3, with the young wife he wed in the underground forces' chapel during the flaming siege of the city.

"We are confident that if the Americans and British had been as close as the Russians were during our months of agony, they would have tried to save us," he said. "But the Russians did not, which is why our people have a terrible fear of what lies ahead for them."

Tells of Struggle.

In telling the story of Warsaw's 63 day death struggle, Nowak said that because the Nazi forces had been demoralized by the Russians' summer offensive, and because the Moscow radio had been calling on Gen. Bor's patriot army to arise, the Polish government in London believed the time for attack had come late in July. Nowak was sent to Warsaw from London with the "tempest" signal, patriot forces were mobilized, and at 5 p. m. Aug. 1, they attacked.

In a short time the patriots had captured all of Warsaw except the suburbs of Praga and Lubeski and had isolated strongpoints within the city. However, they were not prepared for a battle lasting longer than a week or 10 days and the Germans gained the upper hand Aug. 10.

Despite the fact they were arrayed in strength near-by along the east bank of the Vistula river, the Russians failed to give more than slight token support to the uprising in its early stages, Nowak said.

Reds' Guns Fall Silent.

"The Russian guns had rumbled like boiling water, but soon a terrible silence fell along their front," Nowak said. Altho the patriots had been instructed by the Polish government in London, which is not recognized by Moscow, to collaborate with the Russians, they got no opportunity. The Russians sent no forces to their aid despite repeated pleas over Gen. Bor's radio and a request for help transmitted to Marshal Rokossovsky via London by Russian intelligence officers who had contacted the patriots when cut off from their own forces.

Not until Sept. 10 did the Russians provide any real help, Nowak said, and then the few boxes of ammunition they dropped, without parachutes from planes, either landed in the Nazis' hands, were damaged beyond salvage, or were useless in the captured German guns which the patriots had to employ. A similar fate met supplies which American and British shuttle bombers dropped on the city, he said.

All 700,000 survivors of the siege, including patriot troops, were marched 50 miles to a Nazi concentration camp, Nowak said, and the buildings of Warsaw which had not been destroyed during the fighting were blasted into rubble.

PELL EASED OUT OF GROUP ACTING ON NAZI CRIMES

Ouster Is Blamed on Lack of Funds.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26 (AP).—Herbert Clairborne Pell, relieved as American representative on the united nations war crimes commission, said today that his work has obviously "been dissatisfactory to somebody, I don't know whom."

Pell's remark to reporters deepened a mystery surrounding the work of the commission, set up to study ways of punishing axis criminals.

Acting Secretary of State Joseph C. Grew today announced Pell had been relieved of his job because congress had failed to appropriate funds for his salary and expenses.

The amount of money involved in the six months' appropriation requested by the state department was $30,000—which Pell said "clearly is not large."

Would Work Without Pay.

Out of that sum, $4,500 was for Pell's salary. He said he had offered to return to his post at the seat of the commission in London without pay, but was told that it is illegal for the United States government to accept gratuitous services.

Grew said Lt. Col. Joseph V. Hodgson, now deputy commissioner, would take over Pell's job and that the work of the commission would continue. Hodgson, as an army officer, is paid by the war department.

While it was not evident what the direct connection was between Pell's being let out of the job and his policies, there has been considerable hubbub over the question of punishing Nazis for crimes committed against their own people because of race or religion.

Pell said he took the view that these persecutions were "crimes against humanity and should be punished," altho technically international law holds that what a government does to its own nationals is its own affair.

He said he believed Hodgson had similar views to his own.

British Member Quits.

Pell said that with considerable difficulty he had pushed this principle thru the commission unanimously. However, the British member and chairman of the commission, Cecil Hurst, resigned recently because he was unable to get his government to take any stand on the matter.

Pell said he didn't think there was any question about Hitler's future and that the only point on which a decision remains to be made is whether or not he should have a trial before he is taken to the gallows.

In turning down the $30,000 requested for Pell's work, the house appropriations committee decided there was no immediate need for such an agency.

GERMANS GIVE PICTURE OF VERY SERIOUS BERLIN

LONDON, Jan. 26 [Reuters].—A picture of Berlin today was given in a special report issued by the German Transocean news agency tonight. It said:

"Now that the Russians have almost reached the border of Brandenburg province, Berliners look very serious and everybody discusses nothing but the military situation.

"Developments in the east are making themselves felt with increasing acuteness with every fresh day.

"Newspapers have appeared in a one sheet edition for the first time and the curtailment of the city's traffic has been followed by other restrictions concerning coal, gas, and electricity."

People's Army Keeps Order.

LONDON, Jan. 26 (AP).—Germany's volkssturm [people's army]—organized to defend the reich—was called out today to help keep order on the home front. It reported the home guard had to help handle snarled traffic at jammed railway stations.

JAPS SMASH TO KUKONG, CAPITAL OF KWANGTUNG

CHUNGKING, China, Jan. 26 (AP).—The Chinese high command announced tonight that a Japanese offensive in southeastern China aimed at closing the gap in the Canton-Hankow railroad had smashed into the suburbs of Kukong, provisional capital of Kwangtung province, 125 miles north of Canton. Fighting was raging for possession of Kukong, the high command said.

In a surprise attack yesterday northern based Mustangs of the United States 14th air force struck heavily at the Peiping air fields. The American fighters destroyed 40 Japanese planes, including five in air battles, probably destroyed six others, and damaged two.

Inspired by Movies, 'Kid' Gang Robs London Yanks

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The armed robbery of American soldiers by a gang of teen age London boys today landed three in probation homes and cost three others $20 fines. Crediting American gangster movies with giving them the idea, the boys admitted robbing American service men at night of sums ranging from $20 to more than $100. They claimed the weapons used were wooden guns. The victims said they were not wooden.

WHEN WILL REDS STOP? HERE ARE BRITONS' VIEWS

How far will the Russian offensive go? Will the Germans strike back? The British Information Services, a British government agency, said Thursday the following opinions of London analysts had been compiled from broadcasts by the BBC:

Capt. Cyril Falls, military analyst of the Times, says that in the Breslau [German lower Silesia] area Marshal Konev's troops have almost covered the distance which has come to be accepted as the scope of a supremely successful modern offensive, without halting to recoil the spring. Farther north it seems most unlikely, Falls believes, that the Russians will be stopped anywhere short of the main German frontier or that the Germans will attempt to stop them short of the border.

The most likely area for a German counter-blow, says Maj. E. W. Sheppard in the Daily Herald, would be north and east of Breslau and eastward toward Czestochowa, Poland, in an effort to compel Russian spearheads to fall back for support on their main bodies. Such a move must be made quickly, however, if it is to have any chance of success in this analyst's opinion.

The Daily Mail suggests that the Oder river in Germany is unlikely to be a serious obstacle to armies which already have mastered great water barriers in Russia and that if a halt is to be called at all it will be at the dictate of Russian generals.

The Mail warns, however, that the German army is not yet beaten and routed and apparently is still a formidable and coherent force.

ALLIED FLYERS DESTROY BRIDGES NEAR MANDALAY

CALCUTTA, India, Jan. 26 (AP).—Allied planes attacked supply dumps and knocked down at least nine bridges in Burma today in attacks designed to seal off the retreating Japanese. Targets around Mandalay bore the brunt of the storm. Ground forces apparently marked time to permit Maj. Gen. Stratemeyer's eastern air command to get in punishing blows.

R. A. F. Liberators dumped explosives and incendiaries on supply dumps, ferry slips and freight facilities at Amarapura, vital river crossing escape route for Japanese still west and north of the Irrawaddy. The town is 12 miles south of Mandalay.

Coal Shortage Cuts Use of Electricity at Brussels

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Jan. 26 (AP).—Electricity is being cut off in the day time in both Brussels and Ghent because of the coal shortage, intensified by freezing of barge canals. Beginning Sunday, gas will be cut off.

NAZI DEFENSE COLLAPSES AT RUHR GATEWAY

Yanks and British 25 Mi. from Duesseldorf.

PARIS, Jan. 26 (AP).—All German resistance collapsed today west of the Roer river system at the gateway to the prize Ruhr industrial valley and the American 9th and British 2d armies—with 35 miles of the West Wall behind them—seized assault positions only 25 miles from the city of Duesseldorf.

Lt. Gen. Simpson's 9th army cleaned out a four mile sector on the west bank of the Roer in a predawn attack that carried 11 miles into Germany with such ease that a scheduled artillery barrage was canceled.

German Tactics Shift.

It was the first time that the Germans had given up any sector of the Siegfried line without a battle. Seven towns and 97 pillboxes were quickly overrun. The largest town taken was Brachelen, seven and a half mile northwest of the Roer stronghold of Julich.

Lt. Gen. Dempsey's British 2d army on the north flank swept up to the Wurm, a tributary of the Roer, in a quickening advance that rolled up at least six German villages southeast of Heinsberg, six miles northwest of Brachelen.

Farther north, British patrols reached the Roer itself on a front of several miles just southeast of the enemy bastion of Roermond without encountering any Germans.

3d and 1st Armies Gain.

The American 1st and 3d armies crushed virtually the last of the Ardennes wedge in Belgium and Luxemburg.

The 3d army pushed eastward to a number of points where the enemy's December offensive kicked off, moved its lines up to within a mile or two of the German frontier along most of the Luxemburg front, and put five divisions on a ridge-top highway overlooking the West Wall.

The 1st army to the north captured five more towns and edged eastward within two and a half to five miles of Germany against such light resistance that it was asserted officially German troop shifts to meet the Russians had definitely relaxed pressure on the west.

French Gain in Alsace.

In southern Alsace the French 1st army fought into Houssen, three miles north of Colmar, for the closest approach yet made to that stronghold in the Rhineland pocket. Other ground lost to counter-attacks in this area was rewon.

French forces striking up from the south were locked in a give-and-take battle with the enemy between Mulhouse and Cernay, seven miles to the northwest in the Vosges foothills.

It was disclosed that some American troops are fighting in the French 1st army.

7TH ARMY STOPS NAZIS; END PERIL TO STRASBOURG

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH U. S. ARMY IN ALSACE, Jan. 26.—The American 7th army today smashed the German offensive in northeastern France and lifted the threat to Strasbourg, capital of Alsace. Every German was driven back across the Moder river and to the northwest near the Vosges mountains the American lines were restored.

When, on Wednesday night, the Germans made their first crossing of the Moder, they drove into the Bois d'Ohlungen, a wood a few miles northwest of Haguenau, eastern American anchor. The Germans did not try at first to throw a bridge over the 35 foot stream. Instead they sent rubber boats into the middle of the river. Infantrymen erected planks to the boats and more planks were stretched from the boats to the southern bank of the river.

Artillery Pounds River.

Then the Germans tried to erect a bridge across the Moder heavy enough to support their tanks. They never did, for American artillery pounded the river area Wednesday night, all day and night Thursday, and this morning.

So the German foot troops in the Bois d'Ohlungen, instead of becoming a wedge in our lines capable of expansion, found themselves in a death trap.

American Sherman tanks guarded fringes of the woods on the west, south, and east and artillery deluged the woods with shells. The pine trees were sheared and twisted and felled and the bursting, flying wood was as deadly to the Germans as the steel and explosives.

Many Germans Drowned.

Detachments of Germans tried to break north and across the river to their own lines but many were victims of the shells falling on the river and many drowned.

This morning, American riflemen and mortar men came thru a blizzard—today's snowfall was the heaviest Alsace has had in four years—for the mopping up in the Bois d'Ohlungen. There were many skirmishes amid the trees but before noon the only Germans remaining were dead or captured.

German casualties in the woods were heavy, and American losses were considerably less.

The Germans were smashed back also at a factory spanning the Moder. This plant had been a ready made bridge for the Germans and this morning their infantrymen came thru the eastern entrance.

United States Tanks Waiting.

American tanks were waiting, however, at the western exit and a little later were able to register on the eastern entrance as well. The heavy and rapid tank fire killed some of the Germans before they reached the factory and those who did get across to the west bank were mowed down as they came out of the river spanning structure.

[Sgt. Thomas Hurt, 850 N. Central Park av., Chicago, was among the troops who helped drive the Germans from the town of Schweighouse on the Moder countryside, another dispatch said.]

The Germans' attack yesterday had won Schillersdorf, 11 miles northeast of Saverne, the eastern guard of the vital Vosges pass. But the Americans counter-attacked and threw a cordon around the village. The enemy did manage to break out some of his elements Thursday night but others were still in Schillersdorf by daylight today.

Our tanks and armored vehicles broke into the village this morning and raced up and down the street. Tank shells and machine gun fire strafed German held buildings and barricades. Enemy resistance ended before noon. The prisoners were led away and the remaining civilians began clearing away the dead and debris.

SEIZED ON ROBBERY CHARGE.

Robert O'Connor, 26, of 1716 Burling st., was held by police last night on a complaint signed by Lester Aneeth, of 845 Belden av., that O'Connor forced him into a hallway at 750 North av. and robbed him of $23.

GEN. ANDRUS TAKES 1ST DIVISION'S HELM, SUCCEEDING HUEBNER

WITH THE U. S. 1ST ARMY, Jan. 26 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Clift Andrus, Washington, D. C., has been commanding the 1st infantry division since Dec. 13. He succeeded Maj. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner, who has been assigned to another post. Publication of the change was allowed today. Andrus was the 1st division's artillery commander in Africa, Sicily, France, Belgium, and Holland. He assumed command of the division just before the German break-thru and directed its heroic stand in Butgenbach—"the hot corner" on the northern shoulder of the bulge.

MORE RELIANCE ON INFANTRY IS ASKED OF ARMY

Overdependence on Planes Hinted.

Washington, Jan. 26 [Special].—The suggestion from a semi-official source that the United States army places too much reliance on air power and should transfer a lot of air men into the infantry and field artillery aroused interest in military circles today.

The suggestion was contained in an editorial of the influential Infantry Journal, which is edited by professional soldiers of the regular army. The officer in charge is Col. Joseph I. Greene, a graduate of West Point and the Fort Leavenworth general staff school.

Cite Belgium Battle.

The Journal said we have proportionately fewer infantrymen in our army than any other big country "and a higher proportion of air forces." It said the December battle in Belgium proved "that the war could only be won thru having enough infantry divisions" and that it "seemed probable" that we must shift a lot more men from other services into the ground forces.

The Belgian conflict, the editorial asserted, "also sharpened the doubt in the mind of the ground fighter" as to whether "supporting air units" can ever equal the big guns in efficiency "for the tasks that heavy artillery can perform."

"Above all, there was the question whether we had not overestimated the effectiveness of the long-range bomber units in comparison with infantry divisions," it continued, "and whether we would not need to convert more air units—considerably more—into infantry and artillery."

Value of Air Forces.

After stressing the importance of ground troops, the Journal said we must "reassess, openly and fully, the value of air forces in war, especially in the light of the buzz bomb," which was presented as a possible substitute for the heavy bomber.

Study of current results, it concluded, "will help us to establish our future forces in the most efficient proportions by proving just how much intensive bombing does assist a modern army."

MEXICAN PRESIDENT STANDS GUARD AT BIER OF OUMANSKY

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 26 (AP).—President Avila Camacho and nine members of the government mounted guard today at the five caskets in which are the bodies of Constantine Oumansky, the soviet ambassador, his wife and three of the embassy staff killed yesterday in a plane crash. The caskets, each with the dead person's photograph on it, were side by side in a large wing of the embassy.

The diplomatic corps mounted guard last night. Among them were United States Ambassador Messersmith, Peruvian Ambassador Luis Fernan Cisneros, and Carlos Jinesta Munoz, the Costa Rican ambassador, who had been invited to fly with Oumansky to San Jose where the ambassador was to present his credentials as minister. Immediately after the president's period of guard, Gregorio Kasparov, the soviet charge d'affaires, and others of the staff took their turns.

Outside stood the Mexican navy band which later will play dirges in the funeral room before the caskets are taken to Dolores cemetery where the army will salute the dead.

GERMANS FIGHT YANK PATROLS NEAR BOLOGNA

ROME, Italy, Jan. 26 (AP).—American 5th army patrols tested German defenses south of Bologna today and found them extremely sensitive. Several skirmishes resulted despite snow and rain that limited activities all along the front.

Allied headquarters reported clashes in the area of Monte Belmonte and Sanansano, near highway 65, and at Castel Nuovo, Monte Palazzo, and Villiana, near highway No. 64 about 20 miles southwest of Bologna, in the center of the Italian front. Two German raids at Querciola were beaten off.

On the Adriatic sector to the northeast the British 8th army cleared the hamlet of San Antonio on the Senio river opposite Fusignano, but was forced to repel several German raids on other places along the stream, including one east of Fosso Vecchio northeast of Alfonsine and another near Cotignola.

SMASHES WINDOW, GOES TO JAIL.

FRANCE TO GET 50 LIBERTY SHIPS, MINISTER SAYS

PARIS, Jan. 26 (AP).—Rene Mayer, minister of transport who has just returned from Washington, D. C., reported to his cabinet today on French negotiations in the United States and said he was "satisfied" with the progress made.

Mayer said the United States would turn over 50 Liberty ships for world and empire trade. They would be manned by French crews and fly the French Tricolor. The crews, he said, already are en route to America to take over the vessels. This not only will endow France with 500,000 tons of shipping space but it also will alleviate unemployment among French seamen, Mayer said.

Mayer said he hoped to obtain almost half the 700 locomotives now on order in the United States before the end of the year but added that 75,000 railway cars would be slower in arriving in France.

YANKS WHO ARE AWOL IN EUROPE RAISED TO 18,000

PARIS, Jan. 26 (AP).—More than 18,000 American soldiers are absent without leave in the European theater, according to figures of the United States army provost marshal's office published in the Stars and Stripes today.

This is equivalent to one and one-half infantry divisions and is 50 per cent higher than an estimate made yesterday by Brig. Gen. P. B. Rogers, commanding general of the Seine section, that more than 12,000 are AWOL.

The provost marshal's office said the number was twice as high as before the invasion of France, but that the high figure was due in part to soldiers who use their own means to rejoin their units after leaves instead of going back thru regular army channels. Rogers said the majority probably are simple cases of brief absence.

Yugoslav Army Reports Killing 4,035 Germans

LONDON, Jan. 26 (AP).—A Yugoslav army of liberation bulletin reported today that 4,035 Germans were killed and a number captured in two battles and several skirmishes during the past five days. Important amounts of war supplies were captured, the bulletin said.

Affidavit to Be Studied for Violation of Law.

Nash conferred with Clark and John Toman and James J. McDermott, the latter two members of the tax appeals board who had granted the Ickes tax cut. Nash also will scan the records covering Ickes' palatial unoccupied home in Winnetka, on which he also had procured a tax reduction.

Inquiry Hinges on Affidavit.

The purpose of the Tuohy investigation is to determine whether any law was violated in effecting the tax slashes. The affidavit which Ickes doesn't remember filing, but which Clark, Toman, and McDermott asserted was submitted, will figure largely in that regard. Assessor Clark has branded certain statements in it as contrary to fact. If Ickes signed the affidavit and if the statements are false, the question of perjury may be raised, it was said.

The State st. building was inherited by Ickes from his first wife, Anna Wilmarth Ickes, in 1935. At that time and for many years previously, the building was operated by Henry C. Lytton, pioneer State st. merchant, under a long term lease for which he paid the owner, the first Mrs. Ickes and later Secretary Ickes, $40,000 a year.

Becomes Unprofitable for Lytton.

Lytton operated the structure thru a company called the HCL corporation, collected rents, paid taxes, made repairs, and provided services. Eventually the arrangement became unprofitable.

Each year from 1935 to 1939, inclusive, and again in 1942, the HCL corporation sought a tax reduction, without success. Then in late 1943 or early 1944, Lytton was released from the lease. Ickes already sole owner of the building, became also sole owner of the HCL corporation, the operating company.

What the HCL corporation had been unable to do over a period of seven years, Ickes did the first year he took over the lease and operating company—won a tax reduction.

Asserts It's Three Stories.

In June, 1944, the board of tax appeals received from Washington a formal affidavit, dated June 8 and bearing Ickes' purported signature. Among other things, it described the 231-33 S. State st. building as three stories high. It gave the rental as $2,000 a month, or $24,000 a year. It charged that the ground valuation, on which taxes are based, was too high and should not exceed $400,000.

On Aug. 7, Ickes personally appeared before Toman and McDermott to plead for a tax cut. With him was Mrs. Mabel Reinecke, former collector of internal revenue, now a member of the election board.

On Dec. 8, the appeals board reduced Ickes' land valuation $109,600—from the original $504,160 to $394,560—thereby cutting the actual tax due for 1943 by $4,265.

Proposes Boost in Valuation.

Assessor Clark only recently discovered the reduction. Investigating, he found that the Ickes building is five stories high, not three, as the disputed Ickes affidavit stated, and that the annual rental is in excess of $61,000, not $24,000, as the affidavit averred. It was these variations principally which caused Clark to charge Ickes with misstatements and interested State's Atty. Tuohy.

Clark said that on the basis of Ickes' admitted income from the property, the land valuation should be not $394,560, as set by the appeals board, nor even $504,160, the previous figure, but nearly $825,000. Clark intimated he will try to boost the valuation to that figure, greatly increasing Ickes' taxes.

Alleges Loss of $7,735.

Further ammunition for the day's developments was furnished by Ickes himself in his Washington statement. The entire affair, he said, was "a tempest in a teapot." The issues were faked, he charged. It was all, he went on, "a strange admixture of smearing tactics and politics of a low order." Thruout he denounced THE TRIBUNE.

Then Ickes went into the history of the building. First a Robert Ulmer of New York held the lease, he said, then Lytton. About two years ago, he asserted, Lytton defaulted on a quarterly payment of rent. Income had fallen, he said. For the calendar year of 1943 the HCL corporation, organized by Lytton, had sustained an operating loss of $7,735.57, Ickes said. Therefore, he released Lytton from the lease.

Basis of Plea for Reduction.

"Total income derived by the corporation," Ickes stated, "aggregated $65,627.85, and total operating expenses aggregated $73,363.41, thereby resulting in a net operating loss of $7,735.57."

In view of that, Ickes said, he thought the assessment too high and he appealed for a reduction.

But what Ickes' statement did not make entirely clear was how he as owner of the building and of the HCL corporation charged his own income from the HCL as a loss against the HCL.

Ward Farnsworth, loop real estate operator, who has acted as agent of the building, revealed some details. The lease under which HCL corporation operated, he said, called for payment of $40,000 rental yearly to Ickes, the building owner. When Ickes canceled the Lytton lease, he took over the corporation and continued its existence as a dummy organization.

His Rental Is Major Outgo.

Under that arrangement all income was received in the name of the corporation, and all expenses paid out in its name. The greatest share of the expenses paid by the corporation was the payment to Ickes.

In the year 1943 cited by Ickes the total expenses were $73,363.41, of which he was paid about $35,000. Nevertheless, altho he received that tidy sum he listed it in the general expenses which he said exceeded income by some $7,000. Since Ickes was owner of both the HCL corporation and the building, it was like taking money out of one pocket to put into another and claiming a loss from the first pocket.

Willard Cole, executive vice president of The Hub and nephew of Lytton, denied that Lytton had defaulted on rental, as Ickes charged. He said the November, 1943, quarterly rental was paid 60 days later. Ickes, he said, voluntarily canceled Lytton's lease and in consideration Lytton agreed to rent the upper three floors for three years for $6,000 a year. When Ickes took over the lease Lytton owed not a cent, Cole said.

Fair Action, Says Mrs. Reinecke.

Mrs. Reinecke, who helped Ickes win the tax cut, declared it a fair action yesterday when reached at her ranch near Stevensville, Mont.

Real estate and tax appraisers were generally agreed the reduction was not equitable. Joseph B. Ford, president of the Chicago Real Estate board; J. A. Cobbey, president of the Better Government association, and Frank Bilek, head of the Cook County Civic council, condemned it. Toman and McDermott defended it on the ground that they had accepted Ickes' affidavit as true. But an Ickes tenant complained, "We're paying too much rent now, but we can't get a tax reduction."

ALASKA HOUSE ASKS U. S. TO INVESTIGATE ICKES' LAND POLICIES

JUNEAU, Alaska, Jan. 26 (AP).—A demand that the "principles of the four freedoms of the Atlantic charter" be applied to Alaska was made by the territorial house of representatives yesterday in a memorial to congress.

It asked immediate investigation of the land policies of the secretary of the interior [Harold L. Ickes].

It asserted the secretary, while voicing a desire to aid in populating the territory and in developing its resources, had withdrawn large areas of land and water from the public domain and "created such a condition of confusion and uncertainty among the people that we Alaskans no longer know who owns the ground beneath us."

POLES IN LONDON PROPOSE RULE BY ALLIED BOARD

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26 (AP).—A proposal by the London government of Poland that administration of its war-ravaged country be taken over temporarily by an allied commission is receiving serious consideration here.

There is little evident hope in diplomatic quarters that soviet Russia, having recognized a provisional government in the former Lublin committee of liberation, would agree. There is speculation that the proposal might be discussed by Premier Stalin, Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt.

Acting Secretary of State Grew said at a news conference today that the London Polish proposition had been received in the form of a note which is understood to have expressed a desire to have a practical solution of the London exile group's difficulties with Russia as soon as possible. The London Poles proposed that an inter-allied commission should be created to administer the country pending the return of the "legal government."

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 26 (AP). — Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker met Fred MacMurray today and before they had chatted very long the aviator was telling the actor how to make love.

MacMurray, who plays the role of the World War I. ace in a motion picture of Rickenbacker's life, and Lynn Bari, who plays Mrs. Rickenbacker, discussed their roles with the flyer, who gave MacMurray this piece of advice:

"When you come to the love scenes, don't be too flamboyant, but be plenty persistent because I was surely that."

ELLIOTT'S BOOST FACES SENATE PROBE TUESDAY

BY WALTER TROHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26.—Members of the senate military affairs committee will begin on Tuesday a study of the record of Col. Elliott Roosevelt to determine whether he merits promotion to the rank of brigadier general for which he was nominated yesterday by his father, President Roosevelt.

Sen. Thomas [D., Utah], committee chairman and 100 per cent New Dealer, announced the promotion of the 34 year old second son of the White House will be considered separately from the trans-Atlantic and "A" priority cross-country plane ride of his English bull-mastiff, Blaze, which is being investigated by a subcommittee.

He Favors Demotion.

Sentiment developed in the committee for awarding the promotion if merited and reprimanding the new general later if it should be found he abused priorities or army regulations against transporting pets.

One member of the committee privately reported he was in favor of demoting Elliott a grade and making the dog a sergeant. Another said he thought the White House was pushing the Roosevelt luck a bit far.

In examining the colonel's record the senators will find that he attended the exclusive Groton preparatory school as did his father and brothers. He went on to prepare for Princeton university at the Hun school, but dropped the thought of college in 1929 to go into the advertising firm of Albert Frank & Co.

Marries Society Girl.

In 1932, when his father became a candidate for the Presidency, Elliott transferred as a partner to Kelly, Nason & Roosevelt. In the same year at the age of 21 he married Miss Elizabeth Browning Donner, 20, Pennsylvania society girl. Eighteen months later, after a son had been born, he filed suit for divorce. The decree was granted July 17, 1933, to give the Roosevelt family the first of its four White House divorces.

Five days later he married Ruth Googins, 22, a Fort Worth, Tex., society girl. They had three children and were divorced in April, 1944. Last December he married Faye Emerson, blonde motion picture actress, who has a son by a previous marriage.

After his father's inauguration in 1933, Elliott quit the advertising business, altho he reported it offered him $40,000 a year.

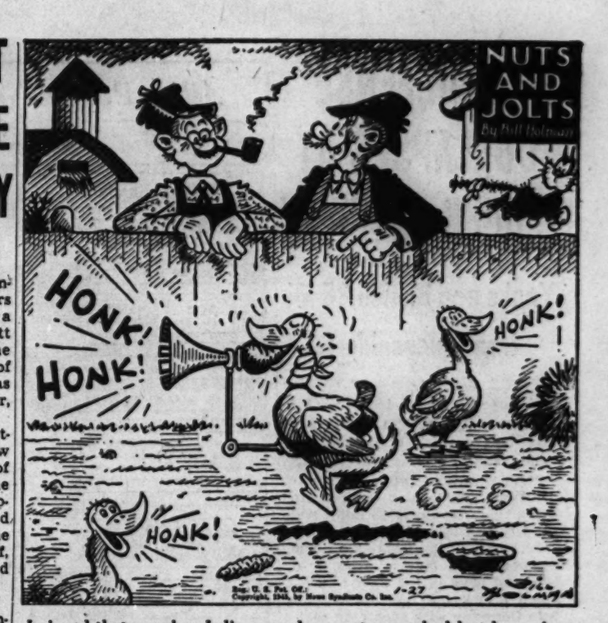
In 1933, at the age of 22, he became general manager of the Gilpin Airlines, which was owned by a friend of the Roosevelt family. In 1934, at the age of 23, he was elected vice president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce at a salary of $10,000 a year and a $5,000 expense account.

An Aviation Editor.

Elliott then served as aviation editor for the Hearst newspapers and in 1936 was made a vice president of Hearst Radio, Inc., in charge of southwestern radio properties.

He resigned in 1939 when his wife, Ruth Googins Roosevelt bought him a radio station for $57,000 and then the outstanding common stock of another for $101,570.

On Sept. 23, 1940, he was commissioned a captain in the army, which appointment created a furore in the third term Presidential campaign. In March, 1942, he was promoted to major; in August of the same year he was made lieutenant colonel, and in March, 1943, he was promoted to colonel.



I rigged that up when I discovered our pet goose had lost her voice.

SLOT MACHINES SEIZED IN RAID GIVEN TO NAVY

Five slot machines taken by police from a store at 4047 Fullerton av. were ordered confiscated yesterday by Judge Jay A. Schiller in S. State st. court and turned over to the officer's mess at Great Lakes Naval Training center. Florian Zogg of 4901 Drexel av., seized by police in the store, asserted he was a repairman and that the machines were not in use. He said further that police had no search warrant when they seized the machines. Leave to file a complaint against him was denied by the court.

WOMAN'S PURSE SNATCHED.

Miss Joan Teuscher of 1904 Pratt blvd. reported yesterday to police that a young man, about 18, snatched her purse containing $9 as she stood at Pratt blvd. and Ashland av. Thursday night.

Henri Charpentier's Column

There is too much blah, blah about a negotiated peace. There are too many men and women in America who, because of their illusions and weakness would forgive and forget German Nazism. They should remember that for many, many years the children of the German empire have been taught these brutal words, "From the German essence some day, the world will be redeemed." Germany has never produced a Christ—only the criminal Hitler and millions like him. Real Americans, beware! Love only what is right and have no false pity. Back the attack. Buy more bonds.

LIMIT COAL SALE IN 17 STATES TO FIGHT SHORTAGE

Illinois Included in Curb Ordered by Ickes.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26 [Special].—Drastic limitation of coal deliveries in 17 states, including Illinois, was ordered by the government today in an effort to relieve a critical coal shortage caused by a cold wave's disruption of rail transportation in the northeastern quarter of the country.

The restrictions were intended to abate emergencies that had resulted in schools being shut down, police rationing of coal, curtailment of war production and a temporary embargo on all but war essential railroad freight in the affected areas.

Close control over home deliveries of coal was imposed in the order, which also asked city officials thruout the area to curtail or eliminate the use of solid fuels in places of amusement and educational institutions.

Schools in Restricted List.

Specifically listed for such curtailment were theaters, bowling alleys, night clubs, libraries, museums, schools, and "any other building, public or private, where this can be done without endangering the health of the community."

The order, issued by Interior Secretary Ickes as solid fuels administrator, prohibits deliveries of coal to any one having more than five days' supply, and provides that consumers having less than that amount may obtain only one ton or seven days' supply.

Affected by the order are the 16 states of Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, and West Virginia; part of Virginia, and the cities of Washington, D. C., and St. Louis, Mo.

Police O. K. Needed.

City officials were authorized by the order to coöperate with local dealers' committees in handling emergencies and certifying names of consumers eligible for supplies. It was believed that programs similar to the plan decided upon in Washington, which requires the help of a policeman to get coal, would be adopted thruout the affected area.

Washington coal dealers and District of Columbia officials decided that a householder running short of fuel must call his local precinct station. A patrolman will come and inspect his coal bin and, if less than five days' supply is on hand, the police will certify an order for fuel.

An even more stringent control was imposed in Quincy, Mass., before the Ickes order was issued. Mayor Charles A. Ross ordered all coal pooled and distributed from police headquarters, 100 pounds to a customer.

Albany Schools Closed.

Altho C. J. Potter, deputy administrator of the solid fuels administration, said the order "does not contemplate the closing of any schools if they have coal or can get coal," Mayor Frank S. Harris in Albany, N. Y., ordered schools as well as libraries, museums, night clubs, theaters, and bowling alleys to close Sunday until further notice.

Coal shortages crippled war production in more than a score of plants in Cleveland, O. Six war plants in Columbus and Springfield, O., were asked to curtail gas use.

20 DAY SUPPLY HERE

Secretary of the Interior Ickes' order yesterday restricting coal deliveries in Illinois and 16 other states probably will have little effect in Chicago, which has supplies to last 20 to 25 days, Fred J. Holdsworth, president of the Chicago Coal Merchants' association, predicted last night. The dealers, he said, believe the restrictions will be imposed only in areas where dealer stocks are critically low.

John Howatt, business manager and chief engineer of the board of education, said Chicago's 400 public schools have coal for two weeks. They use 1,000 tons a day. If the supply falls below the amount required for two weeks, deliveries will be considered "critical," he said. "A stockpile reduced to a five day supply, as recommended in the directive for the critical point, would be far below the critical point," Howatt said.

Mayor Kelly said he had not been asked by Ickes or any other government official to restrict the city's use of coal. If requested to do so, he said, he will ask Chicagoans to coöperate to save coal, altho he does not have authority to order theaters or other public places to restrict coal consumption.

STRIKE OF 500 ON ROCKET TOOL JOB IN 2D DAY

Production of machine tools for the manufacture of navy rocket bombs was seriously hampered for the second day as 500 male employes remained away from their jobs yesterday at The Goss Printing Press company, 1535 S. Paulina st. The men struck at noon Thursday to force 10 women employes to relinquish their jobs to men who had been discharged because of a change-over in production.

Both James MacDonald, business agent of district No. 8 of the International Association of Machinists [AFL], to which both the men and women employes belong, and Daniel D. Carmell, union attorney, denied that the union had sanctioned the strike to bar the women only because of their sex. They charged that the company is paying the women less than the union scale of $1.25 an hour, for doing work for which the men should be getting the top scale.

The strikers met at the union hall, 113 S. Ashland blvd., voted to continue the strkie "until the women are removed from their jobs," and adjourned the meeting until Monday.

18 IN EACH 100 MAKE ERRORS IN TAX FORMS

Eighteen per cent of the 40,000 simplified income tax returns made on the W-2 form, or employer's withholding receipt, received by the internal revenue office have contained errors which necessitated their return to the taxpayer, Collector Nigel D. Campbell said yesterday.

Common errors in filling out this abbreviated form were listed by Campbell as follows: 1. Failure of the taxpayer to sign the return. 2. Failure to list names of dependents, if any. 3. Showing of more than $100 of income free of withholding tax, requiring the use of form 1040. 4. Failure to show whether the taxpayer received more than one form W-2 receipt from an employer.

Use of the W-2 form, or withholding receipt, is limited to taxpayers whose total income does not exceed $5,000 and that portion not subject to withholding tax not in excess of $100. Altho these returns are not due until March 15 they may be filed any time before that day, Campbell said.

SENATORS VOTE NO ON WALLACE FOR CABINET JOB

Separate RFC Agency Is Recommended.

the George resolution, more than enough under the rule requiring a two-thirds vote for confirmation.

Democrats opposing Wallace are headed by Sen. Bailey. Their forces were added to today by Senators Johnson [Colo.], Tydings [Md.], and Bankhead [Ala.]. The only Republicans expected to support Wallace are Ball [Minn.], who bolted his party last fall to vote for Mr. Roosevelt; Aiken [Vt.] a frequent administration supporter, and Langer [N. D.], who praised Wallace as "the hope of the common man" in a statement this week.

Bailey Assails Nominee.

Bailey told reporters tonight he will vote against Wallace regardless of whether the George resolution is passed.

"I will not vote for any man who says he will bring the millenium by borrowing and lending money," Bailey declared. "Wallace's testimony before the commerce committee yesterday settled my mind. He is for deficit financing to the nth degree. That may be all right as a temporary expedient but not as a perpetual government policy."

The committee's action on the Wallace nomination and the George resolution was taken in the face of a flood of telegrams, letters, and telephone calls demanding Wallace's confirmation, started as a result of instructions yesterday from Philip Murray, CIO president to CIO locals to bombard the legislators with pro-Wallace communications.

"Pepper Knows He's Licked."

Sen. Pepper [D., Fla.], administration mouthpiece and ardent Wallace supporter "knows he is licked," according to a commerce committee member who would not allow his name to be used. Consequently, it was said, Pepper did not oppose the committee's decision to act today without further public hearings.

The committee met for two hours this afternoon in a closed session which wound up with Wallace's friends on the committee even losing a motion to put the nomination before the senate without any recommendation.

The committee first acted on the George resolution, which was approved by a vote of 15 to 4. Democrats voting for the measure were Bailey, Overton [La.], Radcliffe [Md.], O'Daniel [Tex.], McCarran [Nev.], Chandler [Ky.], and McClellan [Ark.]. Republicans on the committee voted solidly for the resolution. They were Johnson [Cal.], Vandenberg [Mich.], Brewster [Me.], Burton [O.], Wiley [Wis.], Robertson [Wyo.], Cordon [Ore.], and Brooks [Ill.]. The four opponents were all Democrats—Pepper, Bilbo [Miss.], Mead [N. Y.], and Magnuson [Wash.].

Vote on Overton Motion.

On a motion by Overton, the committee took up the Wallace nomination, which had not previously been before the committee, altho it had been referred to the committee Monday when it was received from the White House.

Overton then moved that the nomination be reported favorably. His motion was defeated 14 to 5, with Overton, Pepper, Bilbo, Mead, and Magnuson supporting it. Overton then moved that the nomination be sent to the senate without recommendation, but lost again.

If Wallace fails of confirmation in the senate, it will be the first time in 20 years that the senate has turned down a President's candidate for a cabinet seat. In 1925, the senate twice refused to approve Charles B. Warren of Michigan for attorney general.

The senate had rebuffed President Jackson on an appointee in 1834. Four of Tyler's nominees were rejected in 1844 and Johnson failed to get one of his appointees accepted.

Protested by Jones.

The chain of events which led up to the commerce committee's disapproval of Wallace today started Sunday night when Jesse Jones made public a letter he had received from the President asking him to step down to make room for Wallace, whom the President said he wished to reward for his work for the fourth term ticket last fall.

On Monday, Wallace's nomination was received by the senate and immediately afterwards George introduced his measure for removing the federal loan agency, which comprises the RFC and other lending agencies, from the department of commerce. George insisted he had intended to introduce the resolution anyhow, but admitted that Wallace's nomination caused him to hasten his action.

Tuesday the commerce committee met and decided to hold hearings on the George resolution and to postpone action on Wallace's nomination.

Secretary Before Senators.

There followed two days of public hearings as tumultuous and bizarre as Capitol hill had even seen. Amid a blaze of movie lot flood lights and flashlight bulbs, Jones appeared before the committee Wednesday, described the far-flung operations of the federal lending agencies, and bluntly stated he did not believe Wallace could handle the job along with that of secretary of commerce.

Yesterday Wallace took the witness chair before the committee, with the hearings room packed again, with hundreds more clamoring to get in, and with the photographers again lending a circus atmosphere to the scene.

Wallace told the committee how he intended to fulfill the President's campaign promise of 60 million jobs by using the unlimited powers of federal lending administrator, underwriting small business, extending social security, and generally opening Uncle Sam's wallet to provide "everything for everybody," as one observer described it.

The committee decided "it had had enough," Sen. Bailey said today. So it moved to put the federal lending authority where congress could keep an eye on it and took steps to provide for the continued existence of Mr. Wallace as a private citizen.

Morgenthau Praises Him.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau today broke the silence maintained all week by cabinet officials and issued a statement praising Wallace for his statement before the commerce committee yesterday, lauding his record as secretary of agriculture, and predicting he would make "an even greater contribution as secretary of commerce."

As the senate prepared for a hectic week of debate on the Wallace matter, some capital observers said they believed the President had purposely created the situation to take the senate's mind off foreign policy until after the forthcoming conference of Mr. Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill, and Premier Stalin.

Face Charges

MRS. OTILLA WAYNE.

Thomas Leahy, 50; Willie Niemoth, 54, and Llewelyn Morgan, 44, were charged yesterday with the robbery last Saturday of the safe deposit vault of the E. H. Rumbold Real Estate company, 624 W. 119th st. Mrs. Otilla Obinger Wayne, 35, who was arrested with Leahy at her home at 7850 Cregier av. Wednesday, was charged with disorderly conduct. Their bonds were not set.

Filing of charges followed Chief Justice Harold G. Ward's quashing of writs of habeas corpus earlier in the day for Leahy, Mrs. Wayne, and Niemoth. Niemoth has denied participation in the robbery, but both Leahy and Morgan have confessed, Chief of Detectives Walter Storms said.

Meanwhile police continued to search for Patsy Flaherty, 43; Wincel Urban, 48, and John [Jiggs] Sullivan, 48, all of whom are believed to have been a part of the gang that looted the vault of an estimated $150,000.

'WORK OR JAIL' BILL DEBATE TO BEGIN MONDAY

Major Battle Taking Shape in House.

BY LAURENCE BURD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26.—The house rules committee cleared the way today for floor consideration Monday of the administration's labor draft bill amid indications that one of the major legislative battles in years is taking shape over the measure among various house factions.

The rules group, taking note of the rising controversy which cuts across party lines, threw the bill open for eight hours, or at least two days, of general floor debate, with unlimited additional time for proposed amendments threatening to run into the hundreds. The so-called "work or jail" measure covers 18 million men aged 18 thru 44.

Opposed by Union Labor.

Congressional leaders conceded the bill, which has been demanded by President Roosevelt, faces many revisions and possible defeat at the hands of a diversified opposition. It is flatly opposed by the AFL and CIO, with many leftist supporters in congress, and by numerous conservative members of both parties.

In today's preliminary round before the rules group, southern Democrats joined with Republicans in denouncing the bill as an unnecessary step which would confuse rather than solve the man power problem. It was charged the measure would place a premium on idleness by freezing workers unwillingly in unsuitable jobs. The constitutionality of its compulsory labor provisions was questioned. Demands that the bill be further strengthened specifically to provide jail sentence for strikers as well as those quitting jobs outright were made by rules committee members.

Penalties Provided.

The bill, as approved Tuesday by the military affairs committee, would forbid men 18 to 44 from leaving essential jobs without permission of their draft boards and would require men in that age bracket to take any job designated by their local boards. Penalties would be a maximum of five years in prison and $10,000 fine for those physically unfit for military service and induction for fit men.

Today's hearing before the rules group disclosed that administration forces already have attempted a "horse trade" deleting important provisions of the bill in an effort to appease both the CIO bloc and conservative southern members.

The military committee previously announced it had killed a proposed amendment, opposed by the CIO, which would have exempted workers compulsorily assigned to war plants from joining a union against their wishes. Rep. Kilday [D., Tex.] explained today, however, that southerners on the military group acceded to this deletion only after some left-wing members agreed to vote against their own proposal for a fair employment practice amendment.

Amendments Face Revival.

The latter section, forbidding discrimination as to race, color or creed, by employers of workers ordered to change jobs, was fought by the southern conservatives. Both amendments face revival on the house floor next week.

Rep. Smith [D., Va.], ranking member of the rules committee, today challenged those opposing the anti-closed shop section to defend "any law that says a man must work in a certain plant and then requires him to join a union against his will as a condition of his job." None of the half dozen members of the military committee present at the hearing attempted to answer the challenge.

The senate military committee meanwhile moved to expedite its disposal of the labor draft bill in the event it passes the house. Chairman Thomas [D., Utah] announced the group has asked witnesses who gave extensive oral testimony before the house military group to submit their views to the senate committee in writing. If the written statements are satisfactory, Thomas indicated, the senate group may vote on the bill without holding public hearings and thus speed its consideration by the senate.

FINE OF $100 IMPOSED.

Leonard Filomena, 47, of 744 W. 119th st., arrested Thursday by police in a chicken coop of a neighbor, was fined $100 yesterday by Judge Harold O'Connell in Grand Crossing court on a charge of disorderly conduct.

SEEK CHICAGOAN FOR INQUIRY IN AUTO SLAYING

Chief Deputy Thomas E. Kennedy of Lake county yesterday asked Chicago police to pick up Thomas Vitello, 37, of 1132 N. Franklin st., a grocer, for questioning in the slaying of Floyd Ventura, Kenosha, Wis., early Wednesday. Vitello was identified by Ventura's brother, Nello, as the person who telephoned the slain man at his Esquire restaurant, and bar a few hours before he was found dead in his automobile on a country road near Antioch, with four bullet holes in his head. Vitello and the Ventura brothers were convicted in 1944 of violating federal liquor laws.

CHINA BOOSTING ITS WAR OUTPUT, NELSON REPORTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26.—Donald M. Nelson, former chairman of the war production board, has informed President Roosevelt that China's relative lack of constructive war activity has been corrected to a large extent and that the Chinese government is "throwing its weight into the job of winning the war," the White House disclosed today.

Nelson reported to the President Dec. 20 on the mission to China carried out last fall by himself and Maj. Gen. Hurley, now United States ambassador to China. Nelson, former Chicago mail order company executive, resigned as head of the WPB Sept. 30 to become Mr. Roosevelt's international representative.

In making public parts of Nelson's China report, the President said the rest will not be released until the military situation permits.

Disturbed by Conditions.

"My main effort in China to date has been concentrated on measures of immediate benefit to the war effort," Nelson's report said. "During my visit to Chungking in September, I was disturbed by the relative lack of constructive war effort.

"This situation, I am glad to report, has been largely corrected. China's government is now throwing its weight into the job of winning the war. In my many talks with Chinese leaders in November, post-war questions were put aside by mutual agreement."

Nelson said that President Roosevelt's appointments of Maj. Gen. Wedemeyer as commander of the China theater and Gen. Hurley as ambassador, and the arrival of the American war production mission in China laid the groundwork for several "significant measures" since put into effect.

Establish Chinese WPB.

These measures were listed in the report to Mr. Roosevelt as:

Active steps to check the Japanese advance; establishment and functioning of the Chinese war production board; beginning of work by an American technical production mission and financing of war output requirements; allocation of additional transportation facilities to China; shifts in the Chinese cabinet to strengthen war activities, and moves to bolster Chinese civilian morale.

Nelson asserted that in addition to an improvement in the military situation, "far reaching gains on the economic front" in China can be expected as the result of action taken last fall. Announcing that the 1945 schedule of the Chinese WPB for production of key munitions is double the program previously prepared by the Chinese ordnance department, he said he expected that by next spring the rate of China's war output should be at least twice the November rate.

W. R. Johnson Asks Court for New Trial

Atty. Harold R. Schradzke yesterday filed a brief in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals seeking a reversal of the order of Judge John P. Barnes denying a motion for a new trial for William R. Johnson, former gambling boss. Johnson is under a five year prison sentence for income tax evasion. The government has five days to answer Johnson's latest appeal.

ILLINOIS PLANS POST-WAR WORK OF 103 MILLIONS

Public Projects Will Aid Returning Veterans.

BY WILLIAM SHINNICK.

Detailed plans for spending $103,554,000 on public works were recommended to Gov. Green and the state legislature yesterday by the Illinois post-war planning commission, meeting in the Bismarck hotel.

The state now has a surplus of sales tax funds amounting to $110,000,000, and one of the commission tasks was to outline a legislative program for a supplementary budget of extraordinary expenditures in the post-war period.

Many of the approved projects will contribute directly to the welfare of discharged veterans. Almost 8 millions was assigned to veterans' hospitals in Chicago and downstate. There is also a 3 million item for tuberculosis sanitoriums plus 9 millions for additions to existing armories and the building of 14 more.

28½ Millions for Education.

Big appropriations to educational institutions are in part designed to give the returning veterans facilities to complete their schooling. Normal and teachers' colleges of the state, under the outlined plans, are to be improved to the extent of 28½ millions.

Provision is also made for the state to help counties and municipalities plan comprehensive post-war projects. Ten millions is set aside for this purpose. The smaller bodies must meet the state contributions.

The public works spending plan was formulated by a special committee headed by George B. McKibbin, state finance director. It does not include state highways and improvements to present roads, which are to be financed by gasoline taxes. The cost estimate on this exceeds 200 millions.

Program for Legislature.

Anderson Pace, chairman of the commission, said that the plan was not intended as final, but was a program for the legislature.

"We have tried to list improvements most urgently needed," he continued, "and those that can be financed from the funds on hand. Construction can begin as soon as labor and materials can be had, and should aid greatly in the employment of returning soldiers.

"I believe that Illinois is the first state to prepare full plans for post-war public works. The commission feels this is one of its major obligations, created by the law under which this body was set up."

Result of Exhaustive Studies.

Pace said that the recommendations made in the commission's definite program were based on exhaustive studies, and could furnish a starting ground for long range construction of state works, possibly lasting over a long period.

Funds allotted to the University of Illinois campus at Urbana are 11¼ million dollars, and to the Chicago campus almost 3 millions. To be erected here is an addition to the general hospital on the west side [2 millions], while $250,000 is to be spent in land acquisition, the same amount for "atmospheric research," and $400,000 for a utilities distribution system.

Funds for University.

At Urbana 1¾ millions is set up for residence halls, $615,000 for a chemical engineering building; $750,000 for a veterinary building, $2,300,000 for health and physical education facilities, and $1,700,000 for a Betatron laboratory—in which 250 million electron voltage would be used in the investigation of high energy phenomena and physics.

The commission recommended the erection of a state office building, to cost 5 millions, in Chicago.

Also urged were new state buildings at Springfield, enough to relieve the state of the necessity of renting offices. More than 10 millions was suggested for construction of buildings by the state welfare department, most of it for increased hospital plant. Five millions plus was approved for the betterment of penal institutions and activities of the safety department.

BROWNELL SEES G.O.P. SENATORS ON PARTY POLICY

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26 (AP).—Chairman Herbert Brownell of the Republican national committee began translating into action today the authority given him to expand the party organization into a "year round constructive working unit."

He talked for several hours with five Republican senate leaders about ways to "implement" the decisions of the Indianapolis committee meeting. The discussions were with Senators White of Maine, Vandenberg of Michigan, Taft of Ohio, Austin of Vermont, and Wherry of Nebraska.

White, the party floor leader, said they went over "general party plans and some policy."

Brownell returned to New York tonight. He will come here again next week to see other Republican legislators.

SURFACE LINES SEEK 200 CARS AND 370 BUSES

Judge Michael L. Igoe of federal District court yesterday approved a report of the Chicago Surface Lines board of management that it had taken steps to purchase 200 new street cars and 370 new buses. John E. Sullivan is chairman of the board.

The report showed that specifications for the cars and for 100 trolley buses are in the hands of manufacturers and bids are being prepared. Bids on the 270 gasoline buses have been received and 78 of them are promised for July 1.

Judge Igoe, in charge of the bankrupt surface lines, said it was apparent the management was doing everything possible to get some new equipment.

The Inquiring Camera Girl

BY MARYON ZYLSTRA

[The Tribune will pay $5 for each interesting question submitted by a reader and used by The Tribune. Today's question was submitted by David Deutsch, 129 S. 2d st., Brooklyn, N. Y.]

THE QUESTION.

What was your reaction when your first combat action was over?

WHERE ASKED.

THE ANSWERS.

Pharmacist's Mate William A. Hagemann, Hamilton, O.—The first time I was in combat against the Japs was on Guadalcanal. We went on patrol. That's the day I won the silver star. We were 1,200 yards in front of our lines. After returning I became nervous and wondered how we ever got back.

Capt. William E. Carlson, Lake Charles, La.—We were sitting in the jungle when orders came thru to go on a strafing raid. We cranked up, took off, and flew in formation to our destination. Going down on a target is scientific. I was not upset until we returned to our base and waited for all the planes to return.

Seaman Willis Freeman, Salem, Wis.—Our ship was torpedoed. We were blown off the ship and covered with oil. The first few minutes of confusion and disaster leave no time to think about what's happening. When I realized many of my buddies had been lost and our ship torpedoed my heart sank. Four or five of the boys cried.

Sgt. Robert S. Wilson, Sioux City, Ia.—Not until it was all over did I realize I had seen my first real action. I thought there must be some higher power looking after me. How could there be so much lead flying around without leveling everything in sight? It's natural to cover up fear, but each knew that the other was afraid.

Seaman Eugene C. Brow, Grosse Ile, Mich.—I was on an LCT when we were establishing the Normandy beachhead. About a mile off shore we hit a mine and I was blown off the ship. Two of my buddies saved my life. After things settled down a bit I was just plain scared. I'm not really over it yet.

Sgt. Raymond A. Matjasic, Cleveland, O.—It was one grim nightmare with many bad memories. The first thing I did was get cleaned up. We didn't have any sleep for four nights and when the fighting let up my nerves were so tense that I still couldn't get to sleep. I didn't think I'd ever be able to sleep again.

CITY SLUM PLAN: 20,000 LOW RENT HOMES IN 3 YRS.

The Chicago housing authority will build 20,000 rental homes for families in lower income brackets in the first three years after the war and acquire land for another 20,000, in a plan announced yesterday by Mayor Kelly. Cost of the program will be approximately $269,000,000.

Slum buildings will be torn down for the new construction if the project is approved. It has been submitted to Orvil R. Olmsted, regional director of the federal public housing authority. The number of dwelling units proposed for Chicago is 3,500 more than planned for New York.

"This ought to be only part of the Chicago rebuilding program," Mayor Kelly said.

"Private enterprise, thru contractors, builders, brick manufacturers, and other building trades, will be benefited, as well as labor, thru jobs created in public construction. It is a happy realization that our government is taking steps thru the public housing program to elevate living conditions and to fulfill the purpose for which we are now fighting."

POLICE ACCUSE HUSBAND, 17, OF KILLING HIS WIFE

Fort Worth, Tex., Jan. 26 (AP).—Burr Walker Jr., 17, was charged in a police complaint today with murdering his wife, Mrs. Jean C. Walker, 18.

Detective Lt. Herman Cobb quoted Walker, who was held without bond, as saying his wife was to have become a mother in April.

Cobb asserted Walker said he had bound his wife's wrists and ankles to the bedposts in play, that she became ill, and that he removed the cords and called a neighbor. Walker took his wife to a hospital, where she died yesterday.

Walker said his father was Burr Walker Sr., Williston Park, Long Island, and his wife's parents were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Klaus of Mineola, Long Island. Walker's father said the young couple was married last Dec. 16.

BRITAIN PERMITS AIR FREEDOM IN NEWFOUNDLAND

BY JAMES SLOAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Britain has approved Newfoundland's recommendation that American aircraft be permitted to land there after the war, and will allow other colonies full autonomy in deciding whether to grant such permission to American civil aircraft, authoritative aviation circles said here today.

Explaining Newfoundland's tardiness in accepting the Chicago air conference's freedom of the air agreement, they pointed out Newfoundland itself was the instigator of the delay, as its parley representatives desired more time to consult with the home government before making a final decision as to whether American aircraft would be granted the first two freedoms: right of innocent passage, and landing to refuel.

Reservation Removed.

Britain's attitude in the Newfoundland case was defined by Minister of Civil Aviation Swinton, who told the house of lords:

"As the separate treatment of rights of passage and refueling was only raised right at the end, the two Newfoundland members of my delegation felt they could not take decision without full consultation with their government, and they therefore asked a temporary reservation until they had had time to consider it, and accordingly, I reserved the position of Newfoundland.

"They have since had full time to consider these rights and have asked his majesty's government here to withdraw the reservation."

Cripps Praises Conference.

Stafford Cripps, minister for aircraft production, told the house of commons that one of the most valuable results of the Chicago air conference talks was the close collaboration achieved between commonwealth countries.

"Chicago is not the end, it is the beginning," he said. "We shall continue trying to get farther along the path we laid down for ourselves."

He and Woman Aid Flunk; Convicted.

If Jesus M. Lopez, 59, and Peggy Turley, 28, masseur and masseuse, respectively, in a health establishment at 32 N. State st., had paid more attention to theory they might have passed a quiz tendered by Judge Jacob Braude in Women's court yesterday.

Lopez owns and Peggy works in the establishment, which features steam baths, exercise, and massage. Detectives from Commissioner Allman's office charged the couple with keeping and working a disorderly house, after a sampling of the service on Jan. 4.

Lopez, a former bricklayer, pleaded not guilty, saying he was an expert masseur and had studied the subject scientifically.

Startled By a Question.

"Where is the plantaris muscle?" asked Judge Braude.

"I don't know," said Lopez, startled at the turn in the questioning.

"The gastrocnemius muscle, then?" asked the court. Lopez gulped.

"The Achilles tendon?" pressed the judge, Lopez hung his head.

Suddenly he brightened. "I know how many bones there are in the body," he volunteered.

"How many?" asked Judge Braude.

"Two hundred five," Lopez said.

"Does that include the teeth?" the court asked. Lopez produced a dirty handkerchief and wiped his brow.

'He's Not a Masseur.'

"I guess he's more adept at laying bricks," said Asst. State's Atty. Myron Lewis.

"He's not a masseur," agreed Judge Braude.

Peggy, a pretty blonde whose lawyer charged entrapment by police, said she was a singer with well-known dance bands until her husband, a marine sergeant, went overseas. Since then she has become a graduate therapeutist, she said.

The fault, she opined, was the detectives. She said they were more forward than is proper in customers seeking an alcohol rub.

Judge Braude found both defendants guilty and set Feb. 13 for hearing on applications for probation.

GLOVES WORTH $211 STOLEN.

OUTLINE ROUTES TO LOOP FROM CANAL HIGHWAY

Engineers Propose North Artery Near Halsted.

BY ROBERT HOWARD.

Post-war motorists entering Chicago over the proposed Illinois and Michigan canal super-highway would reach the loop on expressways, partly elevated and partly depressed, running south of Archer av. and east of Halsted st., under the present plans of Chicago engineers.

The abandoned canal, whose right of way has been advocated by public officials and civic leaders as an ideal super-highway connection with downstate Illinois and the airport, terminates at Ashland av. and the south branch of the Chicago river, about 28th st.

To reach the downtown district from the terminus, it will be necessary to buy and condemn land, demolish buildings and dead-end the minor cross streets in constructing a limited access super-highway that will provide the fast and safe traffic arteries necessary for post-war motoring.

Connections at Major Streets.

Of all the projected super-highways thru Chicago, only the Illinois and Michigan canal route offers the economy of a right of way already available.

To bring traffic loopward officials have adopted a route paralleling Archer av. northeastward and Halsted st. northward. It has been approved by the city council, the departments of subways and superhighways, and the Chicago plan commission.

Driving toward the loop, here is the way the post-war motorist would proceed:

Traffic interchanges of the clover leaf pattern, or parallel ramps, would enable the motorist to enter the canal speedway at such major feeder streets as Cicero av., the connection to the airport; Pulaski rd., Kedzie av., California av., and Western av. These would eliminate left-hand turns. They would go under the cross streets and railroad tracks and be depressed to provide the 14 foot clearance required in underpasses.

Swings Eastward at Hoyne.

At Western av. the super-highway would be elevated over the north-south traffic. Two blocks eastward, at Hoyne av., the expressway would leave the canal property and turn due eastward. The alternative of following the canal to Ashland av. would mean spanning the produce terminal, the Ashland av. bridge, and the river's south branch with a high-level structure.

Thru a blighted district, the superhighway would be at ground level, pass under Damen av., and then be elevated over Wood st., the Alton tracks, Archer and Ashland avs., and the river's south fork. For right of way of this stretch, all land between 31st pl. and 32d st. would be condemned.

Paralleling Archer av., the superhighway would pass under Loomis st. and Throop st. in a depression.

At Halsted st. the super-highway would be elevated and at 26th st. and Lowe av. would connect, by an elaborate cloverleaf interchange, with a proposed north-south superhighway.

North Route Near Halsted.

Northward this super-highway would run a block or half block east of Halsted st., be elevated to 14th st. so as to clear railroad yards, and then be depressed to Lake st. From this point a connection would be made with the proposed northwest superhighway and with Michigan av. in the vicinity of Erie st.

From the Halsted st. branch motorists could turn eastward at Roosevelt rd., at the proposed superhighway at Congress st., or at Jackson blvd. or Washington blvd. to reach the loop district.

Birthday Honor

William Busse, 81 (left), and James J. McDermott of tax appeals board, cutting themselves a piece of birthday cake yesterday in the latter's office.

Cook county Democrats and Republicans joined yesterday at a luncheon in Hotel Sherman to honor County Commissioner William Busse, dean of the county board, who will be 81 today. Earlier in the day, county officials had helped James McDermott, member of the board of tax appeals, celebrate his 50th birthday.

Among those paying tribute to Busse were other commissioners, State's Atty. Tuohy, County Clerk Flynn, Chief Justice Julius Miner of the Circuit court, and State Sen. Daly.

With Commissioner Busse were his son, William Jr., president of the Mount Prospect State bank, and one of seven grandsons now in military service, Sgt. William John Busse, home from the army air base at Hobbs, N. M.

Busse has been a member of the board since 1900, with the exception of two years from 1912 to 1914.

CANADA ENVOY POINTS NEED OF SMALL NATIONS

A plea to broaden post-war international organization to give smaller nations their share of responsibility was contained in an address by Lester A. B. Pearson, Canadian ambassador to the United States, before the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations in the Palmer House yesterday.

While he advocated abandonment of the "fiction" that Russia and El Salvador have an equal right to a place on the top council, he nevertheless predicted that giving small nations a part in world deliberations would increase their workability and better the chances for permanent peace.

He warned that adequate organization for peace is going to be harder than for war, but said that if the world wants peace badly enough it can secure it. Passion and self-sacrifice, as in the prosecution of the war, will again be necessary, he asserted.

INCRIMINATING SECRETS OF PEARL HARBOR.

What happened at Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941, will remain a mystery until some searching inquiry clears it up. We'll have to know what was in men's minds. If the proper investigation is delayed too long some of the important witnesses, in addition to Frank Knox, will be gone. "Battle Report," a work undertaken at the request of Mr. Knox by two naval reserve officers, Walter Karig and Welbourn Kelley, contributes vividness to the story, but nevertheless more mystification than explanation.

The authors begin with two phases preceding the appearance of the Japanese planes out of nowhere. One has to do with the secret task of the carrier Enterprise in taking twelve marine fighter pilots and Grumman planes to Wake. The carrier was under radio silence with orders not to be discovered. Considering what was about to happen that alert was a proper one. Considerable has been made of the fact that one of the scouting pilots thought he saw a large fleet. He was Ensign John H. L. Vogt Jr. He was killed over Pearl Harbor on his flight back. The official opinion was then and is now that he could not have seen a Japanese fleet. The course was wrong. There was, however, a Japanese carrier force proceeding, as was the Enterprise, to Pearl Harbor.

Both the Japanese and the Enterprise on the way in put off their flyers and the two tangled before Pearl Harbor saw the attackers. The American carrier was two hundred miles out when its planes took off for their home base. The carrier's radio heard Ensign Manuel Gonzales exclaim: "Don't shoot. This is an American plane." That was all. Ensign Gonzales had flown into a Jap formation and no more was known of him.

While the Enterprise was on its mission the carrier Lexington, with three cruisers and five destroyers, was on a search problem to the southwest. The air-mindedness of the command would seem to be more mature than events disclosed. The Enterprise had undertaken a secret run with every expectation of success and its planes homeward bound were making a parallel or converging flight with the Japs. Why no anticipation in Washington or Hawaii that the sneak attack, of which warning had been given, could be by air?

There was also an alert against submarines. As the Roberts report brought out, the commander of the Pacific fleet had ordered the patrols to attack any alien submarine found in what were known as the Oahu operational waters. Nevertheless, Jap subs, the two man tricks, were inside and outside the harbor. Two are known to have been inside. One got out and was found intact, beached. Its log revealed that it made the circuit of Ford Island cruising from 4:30 a. m. until 5:30—the bombing attack began at 7:55—and charting the position of the ships. The Jap observer's identification of them was nearly all wrong. He thought the target ship Utah, timber covered, was the carrier Saratoga which was then in San Diego. He may have communicated with the attackers. There is some evidence that he could and did. The Utah was singled out for attack until the flyers discovered the mistake. The second two man job did not get out. It was sunk in the harbor.

Outside there was a different story. There a Jap sub was found and sunk an hour and ten minutes before the planes appeared. Two messages reporting the sinking were sent to the naval radio station. The destroyer Ward, Lt. Outerbridge commanding, was completing its patrol when it received a blinker signal from the mine sweeper Condor that a suspicious object had been detected outside its sweep area. Outerbridge spent an hour trying to find the object. Whatever it was it had disappeared. He went to sleep on his cot in the chart room. He was awakened shortly after 6:30 by Ensign Goepner, who came from Northwestern's R. O. T. C. The target ship Antares was towing its raft into the harbor. Between the two Goepner on the bridge had seen the periscope of a submarine.

The second shot from the Ward hit the periscope. Four depth charges settled the account. Outerbridge reported this encounter and then discovered a fishing boat in a prohibited area. Three Japanese "surrendered," one waving a white flag. Soon Outerbridge was after another submarine, uncertain whether he could trust his detector devices, but nevertheless dropping depth charges. By this time the Japanese planes were poised for the attack and struck at the harbor. Eleven of the planes from the Enterprise were caught in the tragic surprise and shot down.

The time when Ensign Gonzalez of bombing squadron 6 from the Enterprise flew into the Jap bombers, as indicated by his exclamation "Don't shoot," is not given. What did the people on the Enterprise who heard it think was happening? The time of Outerbridge's report that he had attacked a submarine "operating in the defensive area" was 6:51. What did the people in the naval radio station think was happening? This was an hour before the planes dropped out of the clouds.

Fifty American fighters in the air might have sent the Japs away frustrated or have defeated them if they persisted after discovery. What was the state of mind in both Washington and Pearl Harbor? It was a state of mind off which events recoiled without making an impression. Only by probing into this mental palsy will Pearl Harbor be made to give up its secrets.

LIMITS ON FREEDOM.

A California judge has ruled that Cecil B. De Mille could be barred from the radio for refusing to pay a $1 union assessment to help fight a political battle in which his personal beliefs differed from those of the union. On the same day the house military affairs committee refused to write into the draft of the work or fight bill a provision that men forced into war jobs by the government need not join a labor union against their wishes.

Mr. De Mille had refused to pay the assessment to the American Federation of Radio Artists, which was raising a war chest to oppose an amendment to the California constitution. It was not the dollar that bothered Mr. De Mille. He felt that no union had a right to levy a political assessment on a member to support a position which went against his principles. Mr. De Mille is now placed in bad standing with the union and unless he appeals successfully to a higher court is denied the right to work in radio.

The positive position taken by the California court and the negative action taken in congress may be taken in combination as supporting the thesis that the law of the land denies the right of freedom of conscience to all citizens. The Constitution implicitly, altho not expressly, guarantees freedom of conscience, but it would seem that this is to extend only to religious beliefs. If a man's conscience compels him to resist coercion in either economic or political matters, he is to be denied protection.

It is impossible to exaggerate the dangers of two such blows struck against the immunity of free citizens from coercion. They are told to surrender their most deepseated beliefs along with their freedom of action. The retrogression of this nation from the principles to which it was dedicated can be measured in terms of this new doctrine that freedom is of no account if it collides with the dictates of a union boss.

RUBBER FUTURES.

Members of the American-British-Dutch rubber conference now meeting in Washington insist that there aren't going to be hidden ball tricks at this meeting. They are concerned merely with the problem of war time rubber supply, they assert, not with any allocation of markets or other post-war arrangements involving synthetic and natural rubbers.

Their statement is a welcome one if it can be believed. The problem to which they say they are confining themselves is a serious one. If it is given the attention it demands, it will leave the conferees no time for post-war arrangements that would be mischievous at best.

Every one is aware that we have a rubber shortage today, in spite of the miraculous building of a synthetic rubber industry that has a capacity of 1,000,000 tons a year, almost all of it in the United States. What is not so generally realized is that, even after the reoccupation of the British and Dutch plantation territories now occupied by the Japs, there will still be a world rubber shortage for at least two years, and probably a much longer period of time.

This is a fortunate thing for America's synthetic rubber industry. Authorities have said frequently that American chemists have learned more about rubber in the last two years than they learned during all their decades of experience with natural rubber. They have not stopped learning. They have a good product, but one inferior to natural rubber for some purposes, notably for use in heavy duty tires. Costs have been reduced materially, but still are not down to the level of natural rubber at its cheapest. There is no reason why research should not in time yield a product better than natural rubber, and able to compete with it in price. The longer the chemists have to work, and the longer American synthetic plants are run at or near capacity, the more likely it is that the goal will be reached.

The B. F. Goodrich company estimates that in the first two years after the reoccupation of the British and Dutch plantations the world will need 3,100,000 tons of rubber. Of this the United States will need 1,700,000 tons. The company estimates that no more than 1,638,000 tons of natural rubber will be produced in these two years, leaving it to the synthetic industry to produce at least 1,462,000 tons.

This is only about three-quarters of the production capacity of the synthetic plants, but the estimates of natural rubber production seem to err, if at all, on the side of generosity. They include 348,000 tons from sources of natural rubber now available, most of them high cost areas. The estimates assume, apparently, that the principal problems of rehabilitation in the East Indies, Malaya, and Burma will be restoration of physical damage to processing plants and the clearing of jungle growth from the plantations.

Recruiting of a labor force is mentioned, but unmentioned is the possibility that the labor force may never be available again on pre-war terms. The native populations must have lost a good deal of respect for the white masters since the Japs took over. None of them is fighting to get the white men back. They may not be willing in the future, as they were in the past, to tap rubber trees for the price of a bowlful of rice daily.

National security makes it essential that the United States keep a considerable portion of its synthetic rubber capacity in operation, even if it has to protect it by a tariff and pay higher prices for rubber to do so. There is a good chance, however, that this will not be necessary. Technology is on the side of the synthetic substance, and social and political change against the chances of natural rubber ever regaining its world monopoly.

The only thing that could kill synthetic rubber production would be an international conspiracy to shut the plants down before they reach their peak of efficiency, and hand the monopoly back to natural rubber. Henry Wallace is one who has advocated that. If congress confirms him as head of the federal loan agencies, he will have control of the synthetic plants, most of which were built with public funds.

Henry's idea is that American workmen ought to be robbed of jobs to make work in the far corners of the earth. What would happen in this event, of course, would be that the Malayan and Javanese rubber workers would continue to get their bowl of rice, but not their quart of milk. The real profits would flow where they have always flowed, to the rubber barons of London and Amsterdam. Henry, however, isn't bright enough to see that.

MR. PEPYS FORECASTS.

27th Jan.—Felt a touch of spring in the air this week, and saw a pink sunset and a fine night of stars, and felt cheery. Was rash enough to talk about a mild ending to this winter of the Belgian bulge, and hope I have not upset the omens and brought on an attack of February blizzards.

Consulted the records and found there is often a streak of easy weather late in January; also discovered it is always a false alarm. But have observed that animal life feels the new warmth in the sunlight and frisks about in vernal mood, tho snow is still heavy on the ground. Now is the time when city dogs take to riding on ice floes in the lake and river, and get their pictures in the papers when rescued. This is especially true of spitz dogs, and I wonder why. Have a spitz myself, who has no seafaring ambition but sometimes acts as if she would like to join a circus.

Speaking of dogs reminds me of Blaze, the sky rider. Asked Bob Becker and learned he is a cross between a bulldog and a mastiff. If he had been a regular mastiff he could have tossed out several more sailors and soldiers. Hope the ruling family does not take to shipping great Danes. Am acquainted with a great Dane that used to ride around the country with a busload of ballet dancers. When he stretched himself, coryphees flew in all directions, landing gracefully on their toes.

Now have a pair of metal ice grippers to fit on my shoes for walking, easily removable when I reach the oriental rug zones. These gadgets, common in country towns, were sent to me by a lady who said she had been trying to break into my column for 25 years and hoped she had at last found a way. Thank you, Mrs. Hannon of Evansville, Wis.

WHAT IS HOME?

A home is made of many things:
A gay canary bird that sings,
Bubbling kettle, fragrant tea,
Old clock a-ticking cheerfully;
The look of fresh-scrubbed floors and sills
In cosy rooms where sunshine spills
Across the rug thru windowpanes,
Which frame a view of garden lanes.

A home may be the mansion fine,
Or humble place where roses twine;
A home has latchstrings hanging out,
And hearth that gathers friends about;
It shares with them the deep content
Of pleasant hours sweetly spent
In friendship, melody, and mirth,
And teaches well their lasting worth.

The so-called "family story papers" so popular after the Civil war, claiming circulations up to a million, were pioneers in the "to be continued in our next" form in fiction. In such serialized stories the dawn-to-dark worker and his child-harassed, soap-sudsy mate found vicarious delights in the elegant doings of lords and ladies. To the toil-scarred reader the Cinderella plots of Bertha M. Clay and Charlotte Braeme were true picturings of Lord Soandso's foul schemes to ensnare the beautiful but always virtuous heroine.

Groups of these regular readers crowded our store on "story paper night" [males only; women were limited to church and social affairs after dark]. They'd crowd eagerly around as the papers were unpacked and folded. Some impatient readers seized the sheet to spread over a showcase or counter where a slow moving finger followed romance thru column after column until stopped by that damnable "To be continued in our next."

Again one faced a drab week of labor before life might quicken and romance resume its unpredictable weavings. With not too low voiced profanity they'd slowly fold the paper to take home to the wife, who in turn would be in a dither over the delay. . . .

At this point an old Beadle fan remarks that Beadle never left his readers hanging in the air. None of that "To be" stuff for Beadle; he gave you the whole works in one shot, all for a dime or half dime. Chiggers.

"MISSING IN ACTION."

And her emotions brittle unto breaking;
Suspense, like winter, may be very brief,
Yet seem like aeons until springtime's waking.
The bushes at her doorstep bowed with snow
Shall lift white lilacs and spirea blooms;
Her aching eyes on distances will glow
When hills no longer look like still, white tombs.
The river's icy throat will burst with song
And birds will break the awful hush that wraps
The strictured heart that wonders now how long?
How long till she may know? Perhaps . . . perhaps . . .
"A prisoner of war." With quiet awe
Her tear-bright eyes may watch the April thaw.

J. A. O. writes: "I deserted the army 10 years ago and since then have acquired a home, a business, and a nice family, but this 'mistake' has haunted me day and night. What would happen if I should be picked up or turn myself in? Would I be sentenced to a long term? If I were permitted to serve out the unexpired part of my enlistment, would my family be eligible to receive the family allowance?"

The army says that a person who has been AWOL or a deserter for more than three years cannot be tried and punished by a court martial or any other court. If the person were picked up by or surrendered to the military police, he would be taken to the nearest headquarters, restored to active duty and given a physical examination. If found physically fit, he would serve for the duration and six months unless released sooner by the army. If he were found physically unfit, he would be discharged. If he were restored to active duty, his family would be eligible for the family allowance the same as the family of any service man.

O. A. asks: "Can a man overseas pay his income tax in installments rather than let it pile up to pay when he returns?"

Yes, he may authorize an allotment of pay for the purpose.

GOOD NUTRITION FOR THE INVALID.

EVERY physician has observed the bad, even serious effect, of starvation which is exhibited by the patient who has been severely injured or who has submitted to an extensive operation. In either event, the body is deprived quickly of basic food elements, which either neglect or oversight fails to replace. In consequence, the victim may go down hill rapidly despite the fact that expert surgery has been performed.

In many types of accident, protein is destroyed and it is important to make up this loss speedily. Thus, we have recourse to plasma, injected into a vein. Such a procedure may change a dangerous situation into one of complete safety.

Sometimes a state of lowered nutrition is the fault of the medical man. There is too much fear on the part of many of us that the administration of good edibles will prove harmful. A program that calls for nothing but fruit juices and broth will quickly plunge the individual into protein and mineral starvation. There are cases wherein the digestive tract will not handle sufficient nutriment to restore normal balance. In such an event, we must rely upon feeding via the veins. But, in general, this is not necessary.

It will do no harm for one who has not been hurt, and who is perfectly well, to go without eating for 24 to 48 hours. But those who have experienced an extensive laceration will certainly lose ground unless nourishment is provided.

How do we know that these persons require food? There is prompt reduction in weight—in fact, far more than we realize. A recent report dealing with fracture cases shows the disappearance of poundage varying from 11 to 60. In a patient who submitted to gall bladder removal, there was a decline of 25 pounds by the end of the first week. While some of this drop may have been fluid [water], we must assume that all too often the symptom means lowered reserve. Protein, then, requires replacement as part of a substantial diet and a well balanced regime.

We must not be deluded by the fact that these people frequently look well. This may be explained by a form of swelling which the tissues will undergo when they are poorly nourished [nutritional edema]. It must be recalled that the individual is obliged to bring about repair of his own tissues and he must obtain the mending material from his meals. Skimmed milk powder is a useful aid for invalids. But as soon as possible, eggs and meat [beef or lamb preferred], should be added to the menus.

Few post-operative patients will need to be babied. As a rule, appetite will be good. If not, it can be stimulated. The greatest difficulty will come with the one who believes that famine is his lot for at least a week or two. This is wholly incorrect. He can eat and take fairly generous helpings. He may consume five meals daily of moderate amounts and be the better for it.

REPLY.

The pituitary is one of the endocrine glands—a portion of the brain. Various disorders may result from oversecretion or underactivity of this structure. Furthermore, damage may occur because of infection, tumors, etc. Probably the best known disorder of pituitary origin is acromegaly, a condition in which the hands, feet, and face particularly become enormously enlarged.

Open Letter to Helen Hayes.

Dear Miss Hayes:

Forgive a humble and inconstant theatergoer if beneath the fine camouflage of Harriet Beecher Stowe she recognizes three other persons, you among them. Read, then, these lines not in anger but in pity. The time is not yet too late, for if pity moves you to action, you still can salvage for this battered mind what little imagination the theater has left it.

My plea is brief: Please, Miss Hayes, don't do another historical play.

Mrs. Stowe is a trifle tedious, but I am sure you make her much more interesting than she was, altho I'd much rather have known her sister, Isabel, the one who said that altho she wasn't at all sure about heaven, she didn't want to be left out. Isabel was never a word mincer, and perhaps you recall what she said then: "I am prepared to accept this life as the end, provided it is the end for everybody else."

However, that preference has no place here. I am concerned with history. In my mind's eye [and we all have them, you know] I once and long ago could distinguish easily between Mary of Scotland, Victoria of England, and Harriet Beecher Stowe. Mary was a slender wand, tall, dark, graceful. Victoria was a pudgy galumph, a dour ball of gray dough. Mrs. Stowe was a gaunt New Englander with blazing eyes and a tongue of lashing fury. There was no confusion in my mind. Each lady was as distinct as her place in history.

But that was long ago. Since then I have gone thru the seven ages of Helen Hayes with each of these ladies. I have borne the headsman's axe with Mary of Scotland. I have stuffed walnuts in my cheeks with you and aging Victoria. I have grown old and stubby and gray with Mrs. Stowe, who, I must admit, aged me more than any of the others. [By the way, did you use the same walnuts for her as for Victoria? Don't they hurt?] And now when I think of any of this trio, I think, I report with regret, Miss Hayes, of you. Mary looks like Victoria and Victoria looks like Harriet, and they all look like you.

That is a tribute to your skill as an actress and shows what a weak, malleable mind I have, but—have you no historical conscience, ma'am?

This miserable confusion did not start with you. You are merely a contributory factor, but the other two principals in this tragedy seem beyond the reach of my feeble pen, or possibly some one got to them first and they stopped. George Arliss, the originator, has retired to England, and the third malefactor, Greta Garbo, has gone into mystic communion with herself.

Arliss was far more guilty than you. Because of his fiendish success, Disraeli now looks like Alexander Hamilton, Voltaire looks like Shylock, Richelieu looks like Rothschild, and they all look like Arliss. One and all have the subtle leer, the twisted evil countenance, the urbane, deprecatory voice, the sinister droop to the eyelid, and, eventually, the pitiful hunched back of the very old, for Arliss also was an expert in aging a lifetime between the rising and the falling of a curtain.

Garbo, of course, barred no holds. She rambled willy-nilly, guttural and mysteriously seductive, thru history, literature, and our better myths. Anna Christie, Queen Christina, Mata Hari, Anna Karenina, Camille . . . and that's where I gave up. For all I know, she did, too. But then wasn't there Catherine the Great, too? Or was that Dietrich or Camille or Mata Hari or Anna K. posing as Garbo? The only recollection to which I cling with certainty is that the Russian queen I saw did not look like Harriet Beecher Stowe or Catherine the Great.

You see, of course, in what a dilemma this leaves us? Down the path of history, mangling the runes of man, flee only three faces—those of Arliss, Garbo, and you. It is a magnificent triumvirate, but is it fair to organized history? Frankly I don't care whether I confuse Victoria, Mata Hari, and all the queens of Sweden, but to confuse Mary of Scotland with Harriet Beecher Stowe, as I now perforce must do, seems unpardonable.

THE MERRIWELL CURVES.

Roselle, Ill., Jan. 18.—In your editorial this morning you mentioned that you had forgotten what Burt L. Standish called the baffling curve developed by his hero Frank Merriwell. It was the "double shoot" and curved either "in and out" or "out and in" whichever way Frank wanted it to break.

Frank's brother, Dick, never could master the "double shoot" altho Frank did his best to show him how he threw it, but from Dick's efforts he evolved an equally phenomenal curve called the "combination ball" that broke either "up and down" or "down and up." Brad Buckhart, who called himself "the unbranded maverick of the Rio Pecos," Dick's best friend and catcher, was the only one who could hang on to this ball.

Old friends of Frank and Dick may have fond recollections and many a long forgotten name brought to mind by the lineup of that memorable game:

A BRIEF DELAY, MADAME.

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Tell Mrs. Arthur B. Spencer, Hamlet, Ihd., that her order to Montgomery Ward's will be filled by the army in 1948. In the meantime the army will have to hire 35 stenographers, order in a warehouse full of office furniture and lounges, buy five tons of expensive white paper, make 957 long distance calls, send 3,584 telegrams, and hire 19 file clerks. Then her order will be written up. Delivery of the goods will be made about Oct. 26, 1948, and she will realize that everything is under such complete control and she will be so happy about the whole thing that she can rush right out and vote for F. D. R. in November.

There are many more on the way and I'm sure he'll get them, too, thanks to our postal system.

WASTING MAN POWER AT HOWARD STREET.

Racine, Wis., Jan. 17.—So the man power situation is so bad that the burocrats see an excuse for further regimentation in the guise of a national service law! And some one sounds off with a proposal to run the street cars, buses, and trolleys with women operators.

If the man power problem really is serious, and the burocrats really were sincere in seeking to solve it, they would crack down on the insolent and fantastic waste of man power every time a North Shore Line train comes to Howard st. Just what social gain is served by pulling one crew off at that point and putting another crew on is hard to see. If there is any defense for the practice, it is not apparent to those of us whose time is wasted during the change and in the poky trip downtown.

SHORT DAY FOR PACIFIC MAIL CLERKS.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—Last fall we mothers stood in long lines buying scarce and expensive items for the Christmas parcels which we were urged and allowed to send to our boys, with the reasonable expectation they would be received in time for the second, third, and sometimes fourth Christmas away from home and loved ones. Then trips to the postoffice and standing in line to mail. About 25 parcels were sent to my son from relatives and friends. The cost would certainly exceed $75 with $17.25 postage. As we cannot insure them, we waited anxiously to hear of their safe arrival.

Up to Jan. 5 my son only had received one parcel and some books. Christmas eve they endured a raid by Japs who showered phosphorus on them, and they worked all day Christmas. The last movie these boys had seen was on Oct. 12, so the parcels and home mail are of supreme and vital importance in their lives. The postoffice over there with thousands of parcels and mail undelivered had Christmas day off and, for some strange and unknown reason, its personnel are allowed to quit at 4:30 daily. The front line troops are deeply grieved to pass by warehouses with thousands of bags of unsorted mail which won't be delivered now before they have left and in many cases will be forever undeliverable.

BRITISH BRIDES OF 2 DAWE SONS CHICAGO BOUND

With seven sons in the army and navy, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard L. Dawe, 9607 Greenwood av., have become used to sudden furloughs and surprises. However, they will have a new experience in the near future. Two English sisters—their new daughters-in-law—will arrive to live with the family.

Then in London Patrick married Eileen, 20, a pretty blonde. Bernard, who was Patrick's best man, married the bridesmaid, Joyce, 22, in the same church a few months later.

CUDGEL'S DONOR, NAZI PRISONER, WRITES MAYOR

Mayor Kelly learned yesterday that Lt. E. L. Skoug, who sent him an Irish shillelah [cudgel] from Ireland last March, is safe. The lieutenant, a bombardier and former city employe, was shot down over Poland two days before the mayor received the gift.

The mayor received a card yesterday from Skoug, mailed at a German prison camp on Oct. 13, which said in part: "Just received word my present was well received. I'm glad you like it." Skoug said several other Chicago boys also are "guests" of the German government in the prison camp and that they have formed a social club. He added that his wounds were healed and that he hoped to be home by Christmas.

IOLA KRETSCHMER.

Herbert Rasmussen, 19, of 5604 N. Ashland av., and a girl companion, Iola Kretschmer, 18, of 6618 Ridge av., were arrested early yesterday by Rogers Park police, who obtained a confession from them that they had stolen $150 worth of liquor and $50 from a restaurant at 3159 Devon av. during the night, police said.

They were captured in a basement at 1617 Columbia av., with the loot in a box near-by. Miss Kretschmer told police that she, Rasmussen, and two others, both of whom she identified, had been in the restaurant at closing time and had taken the owner, Thomas Sabas, of 2172 N. McVicker av., to his home in an automobile driven by Jerome Moss, 18, of 1637 Columbia av.

Later they returned, looted the restaurant, and were hiding in the basement until Moss could take his father's car home, after which they were going to have a party. The fourth member of the quartet, she said, was Lawrence Phare, 14, whose address is unknown, police reported.

NAVY'S SCHOOL AT ABBOTT HALL CLOSES IN JULY

Last Class to Begin Course in March.

The United States naval reserve midshipman's school at Abbott hall, on the downtown campus of Northwestern university, will close in July, it was learned yesterday. The school will receive its 24th and last class in March and will remain open until these men have received their four months' training. Naval officials did not disclose the reason for the closing.

The closing will come only a few weeks before Abbott hall would have celebrated its fifth anniversary. The school was established under the navy defense program in September, 1940. It has turned out approximately 16,000 graduates.

Many Enlisted Men.

Originally planned to give college graduates desiring commissions the intensive course in navy tradition, seamanship and the use of weapons which the rank of ensign demands, the requirements were later modified so that undergraduate college students could be accepted. Of late, an increasing number at the school has been drawn from the navy's enlisted personnel.

Men entering at Abbott have the rank of apprentice seamen, no matter what their former status was. After about four weeks they are made midshipmen. The approximately 87 per cent of each class who graduate are commissioned as ensigns.

Many Graduates Decorated.

Abbott graduates have made an enviable record in the war. An incomplete list of honors includes one congressional medal of honor, eight navy crosses, 10 silver stars, two legions of merit and a bronze star. The navy has named ships after 28 of the nearly 200 Abbott men who have died in the war.

Ensign Francis C. Flaherty of Battle Creek, Mich., who was killed on the California at Pearl Harbor while holding a light to help crew members to escape, was an Abbott graduate. So was Lt. Iliff D. Richardson of Maywood, Cal., who spent two and a half years on Japanese occupied Leyte with a Filipino guerrilla army.

The school has been under the command of Capt. Benyaurd B. Wygant, a veteran of the Spanish and the First World war, since its establishment.

WOMAN TAVERN OPERATOR DIES; INQUEST IS SET

An inquest will be held today into the death of Mrs. Alice Brand, 49, owner of Brandy's tavern, 2556 Milwaukee av., who was found dead, apparently of a heart attack, Wednesday in her home at 2714 N. Sawyer av.

Public Administrator Rubens asked Coroner Brodie to make an inquiry after he said his preliminary search disclosed practically no assets, altho Mrs. Brand had a $75,000 a year business in the tavern. Her husband, Otto, former owner of the tavern, died of natural causes three years ago.

Dr. Harry J. Leon, coroner's physician, performed an autopsy and sent the brain for a chemical analysis.

Receives Award

Mayor Kelly presenting pin to Raymond W. Collins.

Mayor Kelly yesterday presented the Chicago Tribune War Workers' Award on behalf of the award committee to Raymond W. Collins for outstanding war service to the nation. Collins, navy inspector at the plant of Danly Machine Specialties, Inc., suggested ways to save more than $150,000 annually on mounts for the 40 mm. anti-aircraft gun.

Saying that all Chicago was proud of Collins, Kelly asserted that the devotion to duty which he as well as other war workers have demonstrated strengthens the arm of every man and of every nation fighting for freedom. The ceremony was broadcast by W-G-N.

Capt. W. E. Malloy, officer in charge of inspection for the 9th naval district, said the navy's greatest secret weapon is the skill and resourcefulness of our men and women on the production front as typified by Collins' achievement.

REPORT PREMIER KING WILL CALL FOR AN ELECTION

Parliament to Be Adjourned.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 26 (AP). — Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King has decided to dissolve parliament and call a general election in Canada in March or the first week of April, the Ottawa Journal said today. The house is at present under adjournment until Wednesday.

Such a step would be an indirect result of Canada's conscription problem. Altho King has stated frequently that he did not want to hold a general election during the war, recent developments have altered the situation.

After surviving the conscription crisis of last November, the King government decided to seek a seat in the house of commons for its new defense minister, Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, in a by-election in the Ontario constituency of Grey-North on Feb. 5.

Contest Election.

The two leading opposition parties, the Progressive Conservatives and the Coöperative Commonwealth federation, decided to contest the election.

At the height of the campaign it was disclosed a week ago that between 6,000 and 7,000 troops drafted for home service had gone absent without leave on the eve of their scheduled departure for overseas. The government's opponents cited this as evidence of failure of the government's conscription policy.

Deadline to Monday.

Early this week King issued a statement saying a general election may prove inevitable because of the attitudes of the opposition parties, which he accused of trying to "undermine the position of the government in the confidence of the country." He hinted plainly that he would call such an election if the opposition persisted in contesting the seat sought for Gen. McNaughton.

The deadline for withdrawing from the contest is next Monday. Both opposition parties have indicated they intend to stay in the race. In this event, the Ottawa Journal said, the prime minister will dissolve parliament.

WIFE PRESSES BIGAMY CASE; NO. 2 IS SILENT

Gilford L. Rainey, 24, of 2419 Clarence av., Berwyn, a driver for the Blue Bird Bus company, was held to the grand jury yesterday by Police Magistrate Frank Pavek in Berwyn on a charge of bigamy. Mrs. Mary Rainey rejected Rainey's plea that he return to her. Wife No. 2 said nothing.

U. S. IS PROMISED SOME NEW TYPE WAR WEAPONS

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26.—The United States has some new war weapons up its sleeve while Germany also doubtless has some surprises in store, Dr. Vannevar Bush, director of the office of scientific research and development, informed the post-war military policy committee today.

The office was created by executive order in 1941 to assure adequate research on scientific and medical problems relating to national defense.

The committee, headed by Rep. Woodrum [D., Va.] and composed of the chairmen of committees and subcommittees dealing with military and naval affairs, is studying the establishment of an agency which would conduct scientific research on military problems in anticipation of future wars.

Dr. Bush, joined later by Dr. Karl T. Compton, noted physicist and president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, warned that the group must be composed of new and younger scientists and not "old men looking back on World War II."

Bataan Prisoner Writes to Father in Evanston

George F. Gonsalves, 2015 Sherman av., Evanston, yesterday received a card written to him April 7, 1944, by his son, Gordon, 33, an army technical sergeant who has been a prisoner of the Japanese since they captured Bataan. He is in a prison camp on Formosa. "I am doing well under the circumstances," he wrote. It was the first word from the war prisoner since last September. He was a civilian mining engineer when the Japanese attacked Manila.

'I RESPECT ALL WOMEN,' AVERS MAN WHO WED 8

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 26 [Special].—Francis H. Van Wie, 58, the ex-lion tamer whose acquisition of eight wives in 40 years of search for "contentment and a happy home" resulted in his arrest here yesterday on bigamy charges, pictured himself today as "a respecter of womanhood all my life," and insisted he is "not a bum."

"Ever since I was a little boy, I was taught to treat every woman as a lady because she might be some one's sister or mother," he said as he awaited the arrival of police to return him to San Francisco to face bigamy charges filed by three of his wives.

"Carbarn Casanova."

The mild mannered Van Wie, whose marital adventures and former occupation as street car conductor earned him the title of "Carbarn Casanova," was arrested as he reported for work at a local war plant yesterday.

Even jail bars failed to alter his expressed regard for the fair sex, especially for wife No. 8. She is Brutonia Evelyn Brown Crenshaw Van Wie, with whom he said he contracted "the happiest marriage of all."

"I would do anything to make up with her because she afforded me the very things—the contentment—that I had been looking for in all my previous marriages," said Van Wie, a native of Madison, Wis.

Avid Pinochle Player.

"She liked to do the things I liked to do. She liked entertainment, shows, whist parties—and she loved to play pinochle with me at night. Why, sometimes we would sit up until midnight and even later—playing pinochle. She had two daughters who were married and they took a liking to me. We got along fine."

Fear that his past would catch up with him, however, caused him to leave his eighth mate without even writing her a note, he said.

"I just felt I was going to be caught up with one of these days and I had a hunch it was going to be soon," he told newsmen.

Denies He's a Bum.

"But I'm no bum. I've always worked and it was my intention to send Evelyn some money after I had started to work here—but it was too late."

Van Wie has admitted marrying eight of the women his childhood training had taught him to respect. But there may be more. Police today received a telegram from a "Mrs. L. Schreiner" of Grand Rapids, Mich., which said:

"Hold Francis Van Wie. Very important. Details to follow in letter."

PRESBYTERIANS SEEK TO START POST-WAR FUND

20 Million Rehabilitation Program Proposed.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Presbyterians of the country will be asked for a $20,000,000 post-war fund to carry on a five year rehabilitation program, if the church thru its annual general assembly in St. Paul, Minn., in June, approves action taken yesterday in the Palmer House by its war time service commission.

At their two day meeting, which closed yesterday, 100 midwest Presbyterian leaders surveyed work done under war time conditions and to be done after the war's end. Sixty-five per cent of the church's mission work is in war areas, hence it was pointed out that a large share of the 20 million dollar fund will be needed for reconstruction in those areas.

Program Noncompetitive.

Conference leaders stressed the noncompetitive nature of the church's special war time services for the spiritual needs of service personnel, chaplains, new war industry areas, and in emergency situations. Similarly, it was pointed out that the proposed 20 million dollar fund would not compete with secular rehabilitation programs after the war is over.

In addition to foreign missions reconstruction, five other projects come under the post-war proposals. These are "aid to reformed churches of Europe, a spiritual ministry to disabled veterans, reorientation and relocation of Presbyterian chaplains [there are 692 Presbyterian chaplains in the service], provision of religious leadership for war industrial workers when they move into peace time industrial employment, and aid for Presbyterian colleges to help meet spiritual needs of veterans returning to campuses."

Fund Totals $1,103,642.

Dr. George E. Barnes of New York, chairman of the commission, presided at the sessions. In the campaign of the Methodist church for 25 million dollars for post-war reconstruction, Bishop J. Ralph Magee of the Chicago area reported receipts of $1,103,642, collected since Dec. 1, with total pledges and cash since the campaign was proposed now totaling $3,831,572.

The Lutheran church, Missouri synod, has launched a campaign for similar purposes under the title of the Peace Thankoffering fund.

T. J. PENDERGAST, EX-KANSAS CITY BOSS, DIES AT 72

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 26 (AP).—Thomas J. Pendergast, 72, former Kansas City machine boss, died tonight at Menorah hospital.

Thomas Pendergast.

The stocky Democratic boss who made governors and senators and whose nod of approval was sought by Missouri politicians for years before his downfall in May, 1939, had been in the hospital since Tuesday. His physician, Dr. Abraham Sophian, said Pendergast's death was due to a combination of ailments but chiefly to a heart condition.

QUARTER CENTURY REIGN.

For more than a quarter of a century Thomas Joseph Pendergast was undisputed boss of one of the most able and corrupt political machines in the country. He reached the zenith of his power during the first half of President Roosevelt's administration when he extended his Kansas City "Little Tammany" to domination of the entire state of Missouri, controling governors, senators, congressmen, legislators, mayors, and judges.

But he made partial payment for his dictatorship behind a prison wall. Convicted of income tax evasion, in connection with acceptance of a huge bribe, he served a year and a day in Leavenworth penitentiary and paid a fine of $10,000.

Typical "Boss" Type.

Often called "Feed 'Em and Vote 'Em" Pendergast, this ex-saloon bouncer had the general appearance of the typical boss type frequently depicted by cartoonists. He was of liberal girth and heavy proportions, weighing well over 200 pounds. His face was florid, his features strong and his head massive and covered with thin and graying, sand colored hair. Large hands hung beside his paunchy front.

Pendergast was born in St. Joseph, Mo., July 22, 1872, and came with his family to Kansas City in his youth. He was educated at St. Mary's college in Kansas.

His connection with politics began in the back room of his elder brother Jim's saloon. In later years he explained that "it looked like a good business to be in." Upon Jim's death in 1911, he took over the 1st ward Democratic organization on Kansas City's river front and began building the machine that eventually was to make one of his satellites the Vice President of the United States.

Wins Complete Control.

Pendergast developed his organization on the basis of "getting jobs for the boys" and it paid him big dividends. It brought him a single handed political control that enabled him for years to place in office a large number of his state's officials, particularly in Kansas City.

In 1939 Pendergast pushed to victory as United States senator his hand picked candidate, Harry S. Truman. Back in 1922 Pendergast had plucked Truman from obscurity and made him a county judge, had him elected presiding county judge in 1926, and finally rewarded him with the senatorship.

Federal authorities began moving against Pendergast's machine in 1938 when a grand jury indicted 278 persons, most of them his stalwarts, and courts convicted all except 19. Then the law reached for Pendergast himself.

Bet on the Horses.

For years Pendergast had a mania for betting on horse races. Federal agents learned he plunged $2,000,000 on horses in 1935, losing $600,000. That same year, it was later charged, Pendergast accepted a bribe of $315,000 to settle a $9,500,000 Missouri fire insurance rate case in which 80 per cent of the money went to the companies instead of back to customers who contended they had paid an excessive rate.

On May 22, 1939, Pendergast pleaded guilty to not having paid an income tax on the $315,000 and was sentenced to 15 months in Leavenworth penitentiary where he joined many of his former election workers. He served a year and a day, then was placed on probation for five years with the express order he not take part in politics.

He was married Feb. 3, 1907, to Miss Carolyn Elizabeth Dunn of Kansas City. They had a son, Thomas Jr., and two daughters, Mrs. William E. Burnett Jr. and Aileen, all of Kansas City.

GEORGE BARR, 71, G. O. P. LEADER OF JOLIET, DIES

George A. Barr, 71, Will county attorney and Republican leader, died yesterday while visiting his son, Joseph, in Hartford, Conn. With him was his his widow, Mary. Atty. Barr lived at 206 3d av., Joliet, and was associated in law practice with his brother, State Sen. Richard J. Barr.

George A. Barr.

Atty. Barr was born in Manhattan, a village near Joliet. He had practiced law since 1899 and was state's attorney of Will county from 1908 to 1912. He was active in Republican state politics and in 1921 and 1922 served as state director of trade and commerce.

In 1924 Atty. Barr was elected to the board of trustees of the University of Illinois and served continuously until 1936.

At the time of his death, Atty. Barr was a member of Gov. Green's state medical center commission.

He was a past president of the Joliet Chamber of Commerce and a director of the Joliet Trust and Savings bank. He was chairman of the board of James G. Heggie & Sons and of the Heggie Simplex Boiler company.

In addition to his widow and son, Joseph, he leaves another son, Maj. James Barr of the air transport command. Funeral services will be held in Joliet.

On the Aisle

Understudy Gets Break.

There may be people who are born understudies, who actually like sitting out a run in the wings while incredibly hardy stars go on to glory. They might even shrink from the tussle to win an audience. But for every one like that there must be a dozen yearners who suffer agonies of suspense when an ailing star is being rescued by sprays and sulfas just in time to make the curtain.

A few weeks ago K. T. Stevens almost took the curtain count. She didn't, and Nancy Holland went back to her corner, to resume her vigil. But yesterday Miss Holland was thrust on the train for New York, and this afternoon, or maybe tonight, depending on the time of arrival, she will be playing Sally Middleton opposite Elliott Nugent in the Morosco's "The Voice of the Turtle."

This, among other things, may wreak utter havoc on the once shiny theory that nobody except Margaret Sullavan could play Sally. Miss Sullavan, who created the part, was terrific, but so was the part. K. T. Stevens did all right with it when she jumped into the eastern cast when Miss Sallavan was ill, and she is still doing all right at the Selwyn. Betty Field was a success when Miss Sullavan quit, and so was Florence Rice when Miss Field fell ill. But now Miss Rice is ill, too, and last night the voice of the turtle dove was not heard on Broadway, theatrically speaking. Its next manifestation will be from Miss Holland, unless, of course, either of the ailing Sallys is so uncharitable as to make headlong recovery.

Such calamities barred, this will be Miss Holland's professional debut, tho she appeared in productions at Yale's drama workshop and has had several "Turtle" rehearsals with Arthur Hughes, Hugh Marlowe's understudy, under the direction of meticulous John Van Druten, who knows a gilt edged meal ticket when he writes one. A little, dark haired girl with a deep voice, she was born in Portland, Me., and grew up with Phyllis Thaxter, who was "Claudia" here and a Hollywood hit in "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo." Miss Holland may be a hit on her own account before the day is over.

But remember, please, despite constant aspersions on Chicago's weather, that this relay race of Sally's is being run in New York. Our "Turtle" cast is quite healthy, nightly, and at matinees.

Notes.

Orson Welles canceled all lectures, including that scheduled for the Civic Opera house Feb. 11, to be with his wife, Rita Hayworth, when her mother died. . . . Vladimir Horowitz is here for his Monday recital, immersed in the new Prokofieff sonata he plays next trip. . . . "Ah'm sorry about that suthern accent, ma'am," writes Lois Wilson of "Chicken Every Sunday." "It may not be a Virginia Clairborne's, but it sho nuff is an Alabama Wilson's." . . . William Boss, Canadian war correspondent, directs Rome's Royal Opera house orchestra tonight. He founded the Ottawa Concert orchestra. . . . "Good production of Shakespeare," says the New York Times of Margaret Webster's "The Tempest," just opened there with Zorina and Canada Lee.

Skip It, Please.

There seems to be a slight confusion in quotation marks in the ranks of "The Glass Menagerie." Last Sunday I quoted a letter calling the play "the greatest ever to come to Chicago." Yesterday the line bounced up in an advertisment, attributed to me. I've heard of rave reviews in my life, but that one, if true, would take the cake. Skip it, please.

Vivid Blouses Are Contrast for New Suits

BY REA SEEGER.

Bright new models in contrasting blouses for first spring suit wear have the crisp, precise charm of colored half inch stripes combined with white. You can see them a block away, but they certainly work magic for the black, brown, and navy suits and separate skirt get togethers such as extra jacket or cardigan with dark skirts. Brand new arrivals have trick long sleeves cut on the bias to create the barber shop pole effect. There are two necklines, one high and round with front gathers, the other with a turn over collar to make eithe: a shallow or deep vee.

Colors are exceptionally gay—white with emerald green, with deep purple, copper, or red or blue to provide a wide assortment in both styles. Short and long sleeves are optional. The material is a smooth rayon crepe that will slide easily under fitted jackets.

Another model of the striped material is fashioned with a bow to be tied under the chin or loosely at the end of the deep vee throatline when the convertible collar is opened. This model has simple short sleeves that end above the elbow. Green and white stripes look as fresh as the first spring leaves, but the classics of brown and white or navy with white are the answer as the all purpose blouse selection.

Some thread line stripe cotton blouses have been unpacked. They look like smart men's shirting and provide that swank tailored sleekness for the career girls' office suits. Some tailored numbers have very feminine frills added to relieve the spartan simplicity. This includes white eyelet cotton embroidery, and large mesh cotton lace. Price marks on these new collections are surprisingly low.

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MAC KAY

More Clean Fun.

We have a fast typist in our office who has the machine tuned up both to her touch, an extremely light one, and her speed. She doesn't pound a typewriter—she plays it. Pianissimo but allegro!

She doesn't like others to use her typewriter and, because she has so much work to get out, we comply with her request. That is, all except one. He insists that his efforts to pound out a page or two do no harm to the machine. So, as soon as she is gone at noon, he settles down to the keyboard, to search out the alphabet, letter by letter.

The other day he had written nearly a page before he read back what he had typed. What a yell he let out! Our little typist, before leaving for lunch, had switched all the rubber key-caps, hit or miss, higgle de piggledy—had done a thoro job of transposing them. The typing of our key pounder turned out to be something no code expert could decipher. After that he left the typewriter alone as tho it were hexed.

Gosh! We have more good, clean fun in our office. MARY CORNELL.

Why, Boss Darling!

"We'll write this letter to Mr. Dent,
You said in accents clear,
But in your eyes were words not meant
For clients' ears to hear!

So, now I'm sent to wondering
In strange and sweet elation
If you can hear my heartstrings strum
While taking your dictation!

Kitchen Pointers

By Mary Meade

"In yeast bread making, why is it necessary to scald the milk and then cool it?"

Scalding the milk [heating until foamy on top—just below the boiling point] destroys organisms in it which might affect the growth of the yeast cells. The milk is then cooled to lukewarm before yeast is added because extreme heat also affects yeast cells unfavorably. Water used also should be boiled and cooled.

"Can angel food cake be baked in pans smaller than the large tube pan? If so, what kind of pan?"

Angel food cake can be baked successfully in a loaf pan, the type used for bread and meat loaf baking. However, I would suggest purchasing a new loaf pan and keeping it exclusively for angel and sponge cakes, for it is best to bake these eggy cakes in a pan which has never been greased. Fill pans only a little more than half full.

"If nuts have become rancid, can anything be done to restore their fresh flavor?"

When nut meats have become definitely rancid, nothing can be done to remove or conceal the objectionable flavor. However, if only faintly changed in flavor, it might be possible to improve their condition by crisping in the oven at a temperature of 325 to 350 degrees. Do not allow to brown. Shelled nuts always should be stored in a cool place [usually the refrigerator] in a tightly covered container to protect them from the air, as nuts absorb moisture rapidly and become limp. Crisping may also be accomplished by placing the nuts on a hot radiator.

Davidson Bust of De Gaulle Forceful Work

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

Two new exhibitions are of importance this week-end. The Chicago chapter of France Forever is sponsoring an exhibit of a bronze bust of Gen. Charles De Gaulle by Jo Davidson, a forceful piece of work, the character of De Gaulle lending itself easily to the vivid, energetic treatment of Davidson, an American sculptor who has lived in Paris for many years.

The bust is on view in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster, 2704 Lakeview av. today from 2 to 6 p. m. and tomorrow from 3 to 7 p. m. The catch is there is an admission fee of $1, which will go to the society. Mrs. Brewster's engaging collection of modern paintings also are on view, and some one who went to a similar affair there, a season or so ago, spread it widely among her friends that a visit is "well worth a dollar."

The Society for Contemporary Art, which has a penchant for the dull, is responsible for the new exhibit in the Room of Chicago Art at the Art institute. The paintings on the walls are practically all in the modern vein and the artists may have been suffering from jaundice. That is the kind way in which to look at their work.

"The Judges" — and some one had a nightmare to conceive this—by Abraham Rattner wears a costly value, $1,200. At least two of the other compositions, "The Great Interior in Blue" [not a stomach] by Hans Hoffmann, and "The Legend of Flying Men," a blurb cover for a thriller, by Kurt Seligman, are values at $1,000, and Maude Phelps Hutchins puts the same valuation on her little red "Female Torso."

Descending into fields where the financial air is less rarefied, we find the attractive "Westleigh Farm" by Clinton B. King, which at an institute show received the Carr prize of $100; "Michigan Avenue at Madison in 1861," a quaint and period piece by Frances Badger; "Gulls" by Henry Mattson over a thick and turgid sea, and "Reflections," by Kenneth Shopen, which is bright and amusing, shuffled bits of color shaken and caught for the moment in the decorative confusion in which they fell. Julia Thecla comes the nearest to charming fantasy in her gay "Gadget with Pink Book."

Thru the Looking Glass

Goodness knows we wouldn't discourage any woman in the world from using scent, since it can do such wonderful things for her spirits and for the picture she creates in the mind of other persons. But we would discourage every woman from using it stupidly.

Lately, toddling about town in closer contact with the members of the human race than is some times altogether comfortable, in crowded street cars and buses and shared taxis, we have been appalled at how wrongly some women use fragrance. In a nutshell, they use too much.

There is one cardinal rule about using perfume that must never be overlooked, no matter how gorgeous the fragrance or how much you like it: Use too little rather than too much. Another rule: Use perfume on flesh rather than on fabric, especially the fabric that is not launderable—such as woolens—after each wearing.

To drench oneself in perfume is not at all glamorous. It's a trick associated with lack of sophistication and lack of taste, not with chic. And to pour perfume all over heavy fabric or fur, both of which inevitably take on a conflicting odor of their own as they soil, is to ruin the true beauty of the scent you love so well.

Scent your handkerchief if you like, and spray or smooth a little perfume into your immaculately clean flesh. Put a little on the hem of your clean slip, too, if you like, or the lining of your pocketbook, but don't use it on the coat or the dress that should go to the cleaners, or on your hair—on anything, in fact, that is not washable. And remember that a little is better than a lot.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 26.—My suggestion to Leo McCarey that Ingrid Bergman play the nun in "Bells of St. Mary's" with Bing Crosby is now a reality. There was an awful lot of shilly-shallying around, but at last David Selznick saw the light when I suggested that if Ingrid didn't do it Rosa Stradner must. Ingrid's doing it. Now everybody's happy. . . . If "Trio" can be cleared by Hays' office, I'm told Bette Davis wants to play it on the screen. . . . "Roaring Waters" highlights the Shasta dam and will co-star Bill Gargan and Robert Lowery. Lowery got nothing at Twentieth. Minute his contract ended there he was grabbed by Pine and Thomas. . . . Warners hoping to finish "Hotel Berlin" before the Russians get to that capital and finish it themselves. . . . Nice to know Fred Brady is being oh-ed and ah-ed over. Keep your eye on Fred—he's climbing. . . . Charley Coburn swears he'll do a play on Broadway next year. Sounds like the record he played last year. Since then he's made four pictures and has another one to do with Irene Dunne before going to New York in June.

The Boom's On in Las Vegas.

Four years ago a friend of mine offered $850 for some land in Las Vegas. Owner wanted $900, so my friend didn't buy. Last week same piece sold for $34,000. . . . Peter Arno's the last of the great cowboys. He's at Las Vegas, with not only spurs that jingle but everything on him. He's gathering material for a new show. Can't you see his future Knickerbocker families wearing spurs and saddles? . . . Yvonne De Carlos won a beauty contest, but she discovered the most beautiful male—to her—Hank Daniels of Metro. . . . Eddie Norris and Pat Knowles are quietly buying up used motorcycles and just as quietly selling them to movie stars. . . . Dorothy Shay, who used to do her stuff here at the House of Murphy, returns to St. Regis with the song "Tennessee," about hill-billy marriages. . . . "Guadalajara," sung in "Week-End at the Waldorf," was bought by Ralph Peer 12 years ago in Mexico City. Down there it's been among the first five for a year.

Past and Present.

Mrs. Joseph Sanborn of Salt Lake City writes that she's one of two living daughters of Brigham Young. Says, "He had 56 children—I'm the 54th. We all adored him." Mrs. Sanborn inclosed a letter written by her grandson while he was on a G. I. hospital train where a golden haired Red Cross worker gave them magazines to read. He said, "Her face seemed familiar to me, so I asked if she would attach a few lines to you and identify herself." She wrote: "I've just been talking to Victor and thought you'd like to hear he's looking fine and in splendid spirits. Kindest wishes to you, Madeleine Carroll." . . . Beverly Mathews writes: "Since you got us a revival of 'Snow White,' how about 'The Wizard of Oz'?"

On Her Way.

Anita Ellis, guest star on Showcase, has her own show called "Anita Sings," from New York. She's going to Canada to coach the Dionne quintuplets to sing a song in French, Spanish, and English. Anita is quite a gal. When she made her first money singing with Jack Carson and Edgar Bergen she bought her family a home. . . . After three years with the air force in Africa, Italy, and Sicily, Lex Barker has signed with Twentieth. He'll do Bill LeBaron's "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim." He had some acting experience in summer stock before the war. . . . Loretta Young asked her husband about going out to entertain our boys. He said, "Okay, if you'll learn to sing or do something." She said, "Why, I did a duet with Gary Cooper called 'In the Good Old Steamboat Days.' Want to hear it?" She put on the record, and it was then Col. Tom Lewis said, "Loretta, that singing would stop old man river flowing. I think our boys have suffered enough.'" . . . Ben Brody, our big bag man [he doesn't wear them, he makes them], has gone in for hats, gloves, belts, plus bags. Sent me a playtime coolie hat and accessories, which I guarantee will stop traffic. . . . Paul Kohner told me he thought he could get me a Guadalupe coin. I had no idea he intended giving me a bracelet to go with it. But he did. It's a beauty. . . . If they can get the stuff, the Crosby Brothers will have their own music box to match that one playing "Too-Ra-Loo-Ra-Loo-Ral." They hope to have it on the market by Christmas. I had to spoil it by asking if music box also would contain a bottle of Irish whisky, and what brand!

Cronin Novel's Movie Version Done with Skill

"THE KEYS OF THE KINGDOM."

By Mae Tinée.

The thousands who read A. J. Cronin's novel and found much food for thought in it will not, I think, be disappointed in the screen version of it, nor will they feel, as is so often the case, that something cherished has been transformed into the unrecognizable by poor casting or new and unnecessary touches. The spirit of the tale has been kept intact, and the film has a moving power and dignity.

Father Chisholm is a simple and good man, humble and unassuming and with the boundless faith and unselfishnes necessary to the priest who devotes himself to the seemingly hopeless and endless tasks of missionary work. He believes that he must practice charity toward his fellow missionaries, even tho they differ in faith; that he must be honest and helpful to the poor peasant as well as to the rich merchant, that he must follow unerringly the thorny path of self-denial and discipline.

Because of his frankness and honesty, he often is badly bruised by the intolerance, the petty jealousies, and the evasions of other humans, both in and out of the cloth, during his years of devoted service in a poor Chinese village.

The entire cast is excellent, and features many outstanding performances. Mr. Peck was an apt choice as Father Chisholm, interpreting his role with restraint and sincerity. Rosa Stradner is forceful as the nun whose Austrian heritage of pride and belief in caste makes it impossible for her to understand the unassuming man she has been sent to help until she sees an unctuous monsignor with the same superficial beliefs lash the gentle missioner with icy misapprehension and contempt.

Thomas Mitchell is warm and human as the atheistic doctor and good friend of the priest who gives final proof that his own form of ethics is far from selfish.

The film has some touches of delightful humor, particularly in the lines given to Joseph, the servant, and Dr. Tulloch. Mr. Stahl's direction was sensitive and thoughtful. I think the picture might be more effective if it had been shortened, but even at its present ponderous length the minutes fly quickly and seeing "The Keys of the Kingdom" is two hours well spent.

Find Causes of Ineptitude, Parents Told

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

"Helen finds the bringing up of her children such hard work," sighed a mother to a friend. "But Ellen just sails along thru life with her family, and the home and the children flourish under her touch."

Recently we admitted that some men and women just seem to take to parenthood like ducks to water. In some lucky families both husband and wife are like this, but often it is just one, either the father or the mother, who seems to be cut out to enjoy children and to handle them wisely and well.

So let us see whether the parent who seems so inept with children is doomed to failure.

It is true that being physiologically able to have a baby does not mean that one is fitted for motherhood. There are women for whom motherhood is not a career, but an uncongenial responsibility. Their energies, their creative powers would find a more welcome outlet in business, in art, or in a fuller social life. They are by nature geared to that way of living, and for them motherhood is not a satisfactory outlet.

There also are a few other women who are not by nature warm and kind, with that capacity for selflessness and patience that motherhood requires. These women, however, if we take the mass of people, are the exception. Many women love and want children, and instinctively know how to get along with them and how to bring them up successfully.

Therefore, I suggest that if you're quite a failure with your children, that you don't give up but look within yourself and see if the trouble isn't there.

Many psychologists of child guidance clinics have stated that if parents could and would clear up their own emotional difficulties they often could successfully deal with and clear up their children's behavior difficulties. There may be inner reasons, involved, chronic, or deep-seated, which color your attitude toward your children and make you incompetent to deal with them happily. Of course, these may be peculiar to your own individual set of circumstances so that we could not surmise them here. On the other hand, perhaps we could make some general suggestions, and hit a few nails on the head.

If you are like Betty, a born mother, you can meet and handle all the situations that arise, however difficult they may be, but should you, like Helen, find the going hard, see if some conflict in your own nature is not responsible for your trouble.

Household Forum

—By Louise Bargelt—

Mrs. George H., Vincennes, Ind.—When I wish to make clippings from newspapers or magazines last longer, I give them a light coat of transparent nail polish or lacquer. It will give papers a glossy finish and they won't crumple so easily. This is a good way to preserve precious letters, too.

Mrs. John G., Oak Park—I moisten my pressing cloth with vinegar and rub the surface of a shiny piece of clothing with the cloth. I dilute the vinegar to keep the solution mild, and then after this treatment has raised the nap, I moisten the cloth again and use it in the regular way for pressing.

OPA Sets Limit of 4 Months on Food Stamps

Acting to allay fear of another sudden invalidation, the office of price administration yesterday set forth for housewives a definite policy on cancellation of food ration stamps.

Hereafter, the agency announced, red stamps for meats and fats and blue for processed foods will expire four months from the date of issuance. This replaces the program of indefinite validity, which had been in effect since last spring.

Sugar stamps also were given fixed expiration dates again. No. 34, now in use, will be invalid after Feb. 28. The next sugar stamp, No. 35, will be valid Feb. 1 for five pounds and remain good thru June 2. Sugar stamp No. 36 is scheduled for validation May 1.

OPA will continue to validate a new series of red and blue stamps at the start of each month, usually five of each color at a time. Because they will be good for four months, this means that four blocks of each kind will always be in use, expiring on a staggered basis.

The first red and blue stamps to expire under the new system will be those which came into use Dec. 1 and 3, respectively. They will not be valid after March 31. They include: Red—Q5, R5, and S5; blue—X5, Y5, Z5, A2, and B2.

The new policy clears up uncertainty which has prevailed since late last month, when OPA invalidated without warning all food stamps put in use prior to December. Housewives had been promised advanced warning of any cancellation, but the agency said the emergency measure was warranted because food supplies were at a dangerously low level.

The new program, OPA said, was designed to prevent accumulation of large backlogs of unused stamps, and to avert last minute buying rushes. With four months to spend each series of stamps, housewives will be able to space expenditures evenly over the period, OPA said.

While definite expiration dates were in effect prior to last March, each series of stamps was good for only about seven weeks. This led to buying rushes, the agency said, when the program was abandoned.

Suit for Girls

School girls like suits as much as their elders do. Bold, bright plaids are especially popular with the younger set. Just to keep the fashion picture complete, today's pattern suggestions also include one for a handsome blouse. Style No. 3892 is designed for sizes 6 to 14. Eat Properly, Solid Advice to Teen-Agers

BY SHEILA DALY.

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

Ever since you were a child you heard the talk that "an apple day keeps the doctor away," and you believed it. Besides nibbling at some kind of fruit each day between dawn and dark, you ate three meals your mother had hot and ready on the table. You remembered the stories about "milk and muscles," "carrots make your hair curly," and you ate well and often.

on the SOLID side

But since your freshman year the rush of high school has gotten the best of you, and too often you "don't have time for breakfast" or "just aren't hungry for lunch." If it weren't for cokes and potato chips, with an occasional hamburger and milk shake thrown in, you might waste away completely!

Maybe it's because you're anxious about your figure, you feel that you can't eat the usual round of meals and still rank in the pretty and petite department. Perhaps you just can't fit in that 20 minutes for breakfast, or you'd rather dance during the lunch hour—but whatever the excuse, it isn't a good one.

You're still growing and still need building foods for growth and to repair muscles used in sports and in just going to school. School lunchrooms frequently offer "plate lunch specials." It's smart to order a "special" because it will be well balanced. And if you are worrying about slowing down on those curves, don't give up eating, but eat wisely—skip some of the fats, sweets and starches. You must put something inside of you to keep ticking.

And if it's that rush in the early bright that makes you skip breakfast, if you can't fit in the morning bustle and still have time for more than orange juice and a few crumbs of toast, the best solution is to set the clock 15 minutes earlier. It takes a good send-off of bread, butter, and the trimmings to give a guy or gal enough energy to get thru the stiff schedule of an average day at school. You can't get A grades on peanuts and popcorn.

You may feel fit now, but take care of yourself. Even Superman takes time out for lunch.

'Private Investigator Maclain' . . . . . By Baynard Kendrick

[Copyright: 1945: By Baynard Kendrick.]

INSTALMENT XVIII.
UNEXPECTED CALLER.

Maclain got up with the easy lift of a man in perfect trim. "I want to take a turn about the terrace and get it clear in my mind."

"It's dark out there," said Lucia.

Lucia said, "How does he know what he's doing, Paul? What does he hope to find out there?"

"He counts his steps," Paul told her, "and apparently never forgets them. He can move with perfect confidence around any place where he's been before."

Lucia said, "What does he hope to find out there?"

Paul said, "He can't see anything if he finds it. You can search me. I can't even imagine what a blind man would be looking for."

They sat silent for a long time. Lucia swung about startled as her bedroom door opened and the captain stepped out into the study, holding blackened hands before him. "It's getting late," he said without preamble. "May I wash up before I go?"

"Sure," said Paul. "Come along."

"What did you find?" asked Lucia.

Maclain turned away from his escort as tho he'd forgotten all about her and said absentmindedly, "I don't know. I came in thru your room."

She watched his straight figure disappear into the foyer headed for Paul's bedroom.

A breeze had sprung up, rustling an evening paper on the table. It struck at Lucia with a touch of chill. She crossed the room and closed the terrace door.

The captain came back and stood quite still in the foyer while Schnucke trotted up to his side. "Bob Morse promised to help me, Lucia. Don't worry. I'll get in touch with you as soon as I find out anything more. Good night."

Paul came back but didn't sit down. "He must have been rooting around in the dirt under the bushes. God knows what for. Are you going to stay here tonight?"

"No," said Lucia, "but I want to straighten out some things in my room."

"Shall I see you back to the hotel?"

"Don't be silly, Paul."

"Look," he said quickly, "I know things aren't so hot right now. If you don't want me to hang around drawing my salary, say so. I can get another job in five minutes today."

"You want to leave?" Lucia asked him.

He said, "O, no. If I can be of any help I'll stick around. But you might ask Larmar tomorrow. He might want to let me go. I think I'll turn in."

"Forget it, and keep your chin up."

She sorted clothes for half an hour, packing another suitcase, then started going thru her desk. Old bills and old letters, stirring up old memories. Bills that had been paid and letters that had been answered.

It was long past midnight when she finished.

The wind had strengthened and a sudden gust dashed rain thru her open window. Lucia got up and closed it, still not quite conscious that a heavy summer storm had broken.

Larmar had always comforted her during thunderstorms, but Larmar was in jail.

Fear of the storm became predominant. It was terrible to know that you had a room where you couldn't go and a home where you couldn't stay. Yet, the terrace, and the gun room, and the memories were worse than the raging storm.

She snapped the suitcase shut, set her teeth, and put out the lights. For an instant she stopped in the study, moved by an impulse to awaken Paul. She dismissed it instantly and opened the front door.

The man with the deep cleft scar in his chin was standing outside in the hall.

Lucia drew back into the foyer, her throat muscles tied tight with panic.

"I want to talk to you, Mrs. Jordan." His hand went against the panel, pushing the door as he followed her in.

The door clicked shut, leaving them both in blackness, and still she couldn't call.

He was breathing close as she found the switch and lit the light in the hall.

"Who are you?" she managed to say, and each word hurt.

"You needn't be frightened. I want to talk to you, that's all."

She found the lamp and lit it.

"Sit down," he said.

He took a chair quite near her and his coat stretched tight again across the width of his shoulders as it had in the hotel lobby.

Screaming seemed futile, for the unreality had descended once more. There was a storm off stage, with thunder and lightning and she was caught on the scene with every exit barred. Somewhere off stage there were other actors, but she had to find the cue to bring them on. Then they might come again and play their silly parts—Larmar and Bob, Duncan Maclain and Paul.

"Gallagher's the name," he said. "Did you ever hear it?"

"Never. What do you want? I've never heard of you."

"That's a hot one, isn't it?" His wide lips worked in a grimace. "The name Martin Gallagher means nothing at all to your murdering husband and you?"

"Nothing," said Lucia.

"You're a lying woman. Your husband knew she was married. But she didn't think her darling Martin would ever get back from the war."

Lucia could only say, "Who?"

"That little slut, Rose Gallagher. She was a slut all right, but I loved her. Maybe you knew her better by her phony name of Troy." His heavy wide shoulders hunched forward. "Maybe it's me that should be killing you."

ALDERMEN FIND FIRE HAZARDS IN TOUR OF HOTELS

Prompt Corrective Action by Council Pledged.

Conditions which one alderman said "are so shocking one doesn't realize how they can exist" were found by a city council subcommittee yesterday during an inspection of three alleged fire trap buildings with Fire Marshal Anthony J. Mullaney.

An attempt to work a fire extinguisher in a hotel at 538 S. State st. disclosed it was filled with water. "I don't know why it doesn't work," said Sam Padovano, the hotel operator, after Mullaney had demanded the extinguisher be tried out. "I recharged it yesterday."

A stairway leading from the second to the third floor in the hotel, where 70 persons were registered Thursday night, was blocked by bedsprings and bedsteads.

Heated by Two Stoves.

The hotel, which occupies the second and third floors of the building, was heated by two coal stoves on the second floor. Heat rose to the third floor thru holes cut in the second floor ceiling by Padovano and entered rooms thru transoms devoid of glass.

Ald. Duffy [19th] termed a four story building where 90 persons live at 1012 N. Wells st. the worst place the committee found in its tour. Doors to stairways opened inward, rubbish littered the halls, and a barrel of rubbish was found behind a stairway door.

The basement contained rubbish, furniture, mattresses, and other combustible materials in violation of city ordinances, and an odor of coal gas permeated the building.

Boiler Rests on Floor.

A double building at 500-08 N. State st., where 50 persons live, disclosed these violations of fire prevention ordinances:

A hot water boiler, set in place by knocking out a wall, which rested on wooden flooring; blocked stairways; barricaded exits leading to stairways, and an open stair well, which a coroner's jury termed the principal cause of the high death toll in a fire which killed 14 on Jan. 16 in the General Clark hotel, 217 N. Clark st.

Immediate action to correct such conditions was promised by Ald. Duffy, chairman of the subcommittee appointed to investigate fire hazards.

POLICE DISCOUNT ANTI-SEMITISM IN SCHOOL RIOT

The recent fight at a basketball game between Amundsen and Von Steuben High school pupils was not the result of organized anti-Semitism, Supervising Capt. Joseph Goldberg said yesterday.

"The assault upon a score of Jewish boys who are students at Von Steuben was not made because of racial prejudice, I am sure," Capt. Goldberg told Ira Latimer, secretary of the Civil Liberties league, and two members of the anti-defamation league of the B'nai B'rith. Capt. Goldberg said the police have been plagued by similar incidents between students of rival schools where nationalities differed.

Capt. Goldberg expressed the belief that the responsibility of preventing future outbreaks rests with the board of education.

"We will complete our investigation of this case," the police official promised. "Numerous assaults of criminal nature have occurred. We will endeavor to learn the identity of and prosecute the offenders.

"The proper way to halt riotings of that sort," he said, "is to prevent such crowds from gathering, and that can be done only by banning that particular contest. I am not in favor of the suppression of sports," Capt. Goldberg said, "but this seems to be the only solution until the students prove they can conduct themselves properly."

THEATER OF AIR COMEDY TONIGHT IS 'RIO RITA'

The Chicago Theater of the Air will present "Rio Rita," the familiar musical comedy with a Mexican flavor, over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual Broadcasting system from 9 to 10 o'clock tonight. Among the 4,500 guests who will witness the broadcast in Medinah Temple auditorium will be more than 1,000 members of the civil air patrol and their friends.

Marion Claire will sing the title role; Bruce Foote, Capt. Jim Stewart, a Texas Ranger, and Angelo Raffaelli, Roberto. Henry Weber will conduct the W-G-N Symphony orchestra and chorus. The dramatic cast will include Sondra Gair, William Everett, Wilms Herbert, Carl Kroenke, Jerry Walter, Arnold Robertson, and John Barclay.

ILLINOIS RALLY STOPS IOWA QUINTET, 43-42

TOPPING, MAC PHAIL, WEBB PAY $2,800,000 FOR YANKS

DEAL INCLUDES FARM HOLDINGS, 400 ATHLETES

Ex-Dodger Chief Is New President.

Harridge Pleased

"WE have just been advised officially that the New York Yankee ball club has been sold to a group composed of Larry MacPhail, Dan Topping and Del Webb," said Will Harridge, American league president, yesterday.

"While the new owners must have the unanimous approval of the other American league members, I am sure they will welcome MacPhail and his associates into our organization. This action probably will be the first order of business at our meeting on Feb. 2 in New York. We are especially gratified to learn that Ed Barrow will remain active with this new group as chairman of the board, a fine recognition of his 24 years of service as general manager and later president of the Yankees."

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—Control of the vast New York Yankee baseball empire today passed into the hands of Col. Larry MacPhail, Capt. Daniel R. Topping, and Del Webb of Phoenix, Ariz., for an estimated purchase price of $2,800,000.

Real estate including the Yankee stadium and Ruppert stadiums in Newark and Kansas City were included in the deal, as well as their respective franchises and those of Binghamton, N. Y., in the Eastern league and Norfolk, Va., in the Piedmont league.

Almost 400 players, 269 of whom are in the service on the organization's national defense list, went with the deal which was concluded shortly before a late afternoon press conference in the pressroom of a 52d st. restaurant.

MacPhail Buys Barrow's Stock.

The 86.88 per cent of the stock administered by the Manufacturers Trust company in behalf of the three heirs of the late Jacob Ruppert brought $2,500,000 in cash, according to Wilfred Wottrick, vice president of the trust company.

MacPhail said he concluded the deal for the 10 per cent owned by President Ed Barrow for an indefinite sum "between $300,000 and $500,000" but that George E. Ruppert, brother of the former owner, did not sell his holdings amounting to 3.12 per cent of the stock.

J. Arthur Friedlund, Chicago attorney, negotiated the deal.

Barrow will continue as chairman of the board of directors and will continue to be acting president until MacPhail is placed on the army's inactive duty list Feb. 10. When the colonel is out of uniform he will become president and general manager of the club.

McCarthy Stays On.

Manager Joe McCarthy will continue to boss the club on the field and no changes are anticipated in the organization's personnel. McCarthy signed a three year contract in 1944 and George M. Weiss, secretary of the club and head of the vast farm system, has a contract paralleling Barrow's, which has three years to run.

Wottrick said the sale was not in any way forced, altho he admitted that federal taxes were a factor. He revealed the deal had been on the fire for over a year.

"We have been connected with the Ruppert estate since 1941 and there has been no bona fide offer from any other person in that time," the trust company executive declared.

Win a Lot of Pennants.

Since the death of Ruppert on Jan. 13, 1939, there have been many persons reported interested in buying the Yankees, who have won more pennants and participated in and captured more world series than any other club.

THIS DEAL PLEASED ALL CONCERNED

SALE OF YANKS MAY AFFECT PRO FOOTBALL SCENE

BY EDWARD PRELL.

It now is most apparent that the National Football leaguers had the wisdom of a roomful of Solomons in adjourning their recent meeting in Chicago after the owners had barely more than greeted each other. Now, less than three weeks later, one of their own, Capt. Dan Topping of the marines, has become co-owner of the New York Yankees baseball team, which under the old Ed Barrow regime, was bitterly opposed to pro football.

Capt. Topping's associate, Lt. Col. Larry MacPhail, likewise is football minded. Years ago he officiated in Western conference games. It reasonably may be assumed that this army-marine combine, regardless of what either says at this time, will expect to shift from big league baseball to big league football with the changing seasons. It is even more elementary that they would view Yankee stadium as the proper locale for their gridiron operations.

No More than 45,000 Fans?

A mile away, across the Harlem river, is the Polo Grounds. The Maras, father Tim and son Jack, proprietors of the football Giants, have had a monopoly these many years. They are not a little touchy concerning their territorial rights—as members of the National league, of course. The Maras, who have studied the city's pro football pulse most extensively, declare there are no more than 45,000 bonafide gridiron fans in New York, and furthermore, that there aren't enough Sundays to afford a suitable schedule for more than one club.

Capt. Topping is president, secretary, and treasurer of the Brooklyn Tigers in the same National league which houses the Maras' Giants. Even before yesterday's sale of the baseball Yankees the captain and his associates were at odds with Branch Rickey, president of the baseball Dodgers and their Ebbetts field landlord. Topping and his Tigers asked for a two year lease to play in Ebbetts field, but when offered only a one year contract by Rickey coldly turned it down.

To make matters more confusing in the New York-Brooklyn area Rickey has ambitions to double as a baseball and pro football operator.

May Change Stand.

Adding to the complicated New York situation are the plans of two rival leagues to enter the picture. These are the All-America Football

A. L. to Find Needed Tonic in MacPhail

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The perpetually tight laced American league, which from its inception has considered dignity one of its many assets, undoubtedly squirmed a bit yesterday when the news was spread over the land that Larry MacPhail had bought himself a membership in the organization.

Let the American league have no fears that it has a problem child. It might be more fitting for the American to conclude that its gain is the National league's loss. It's true that the Colonel, as the ex-Brooklyn fireball now will be known, dazed even his National leagues associates at times but he traveled on his own and got results. The Yankees, always conducted strictly on a business basis with a minimum of the personal touch so valuable to a ball club, provide him with a virgin field. There'll be red paint aflyin' but the Yanks won't suffer.

His Spectacular Ideas Pay Off in Brooklyn.

MacPhail first startled the National leaguers—and also the sedate American leaguers—when he made up his mind that night baseball wasn't exclusively a minor league commodity. As boss at Cincinnati, he called in the electricians and steel workers and gave 'em the order. The electric light game instantly became a holiday event in the Rhineland, with parades, fireworks, etc.

MacPhail went to Brooklyn, took a ragtag layout by the scruff of the neck and put it in presentable clothing. Larry ordered another electric light plant. Giddy colored paints were dabbed all over the park. MacPhail shopped around and made smart deals. Pennants were won. The money rolled thru the turnstiles. The mortgage was lifted. A spoken word in Brooklyn maligning the Dodgers was an invitation to a murder.

Newspaper Men Have Reason for Liking Larry.

And even tho MacPhail took it upon himself to prove that major league fans would take to the night game, he knew its limitations. When the novelty spread to other parks with similar success, the move started for more night exhibitions. MacPhail cautioned that seven per season, the original allotment, should be retained. But the limits were raised and raised and the attend-

N. U., DE PAUL FACE STADIUM RIVALS TONIGHT

3 Games Tonight

INDIANA'S high scoring basketball team, with two victories and two defeats on its record, has a chance to move into the thick of the Big Nine race when it meets Michigan in Bloomington tonight. In other conference games, neither of which can affect the upper half of the standings, Minnesota plays Purdue in Lafayette and Northwestern meets Wisconsin in the Chicago Stadium.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Northwestern's basketball team, which opened its Western conference season three weeks ago with a victory over Wisconsin, hopes to repeat that performance tonight in the second contest of the Stadium double header. If successful, the Wildcats will have a .500 rating after losing three consecutive games on the road and can hope for a first division berth.

Marquette makes its second visit to the Stadium this season to meet De Paul in the opening game tonight. The Blue Demons now have won 13 games and lost only to Illinois, a defeat for which they atoned by trouncing the Illini on their home court. The first game starts at 8:15 p. m.

Wildcats Still Respected.

Despite consecutive defeats at Ohio State, Illinois, and Purdue, Northwestern still rates as one of the best teams in the conference, altho it is most unlikely the Wildcats will have any share in the championship. In Max Morris, erstwhile Illinois athlete, Northwestern has the leading Big Nine scorer. But after impressive victories over Wisconsin, 52 to 37, and Minnesota, 52 to 33, the Wildcats flunked their road tests. Handicap of travel, Frank Wright's illness at Ohio State, and Capt. Benny Schadler's ineffectiveness on attack against Illinois and Purdue were factors contributing to Northwestern's defeats.

Morris continues his steady scoring pace. Wright has completely recovered and Schadler, Coach Dutch Longborg asserts, again is finding the target on long shots.

Must Stop Mikan.

Wisconsin, which has a victory over Minnesota to offset that defeat by Northwestern, theoretically has a better title prospect than Northwestern. Moreover, the Badgers, since they will have the services of Ray Patterson, their scoring ace—he did not play in the first Northwestern game—may be much more effective than the record indicates. Wisconsin, however, has had to fill two vacancies caused by ineligibility.

Marquette's problem is as simple but more difficult, since George Mikan always is the key to De Paul's attack.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BY ARCH WARD.

JIMMY WILSON'S boy, Bob, who was killed recently on a mission over India, was to have become a Cub on his release from the air force, according to Vice President Jim Gallagher. . . . Gallagher, who has a very hard nose in most matters, wept when he heard Bob had been killed less than a month after he had called at the Cub offices in November. . . . Harvey Hester, genial president of the Miami team of the All-America football conference, hopes to have a championship club in his first year of operation, but whether he does or not this department predicts he will win the story telling honors of the organization. . . . One of his favorites is about a friend in Birmingham, Ala., who many years ago inherited enough money to live the rest of his days without working. . . . It's a true story, but for the purpose of this column we shall give the gentleman a fictitious name. . . . Let's call him Moe. . . . Moe, it seems, hasn't worked a minute since he inherited his legacy. . . . He has been on a continuous drunk for nine years. . . . "Any drinking records he breaks from now on are his own," Hester says. . . . Moe is a bachelor and has a Negro attendant to look after him. . . . When he awakes in the morning the first thing he requests is a drink. . . . The servant has a system to determine whether Moe is in condition to have another drink. . . . "I don't ask him no hard questions like what day is it or what month is it," the Negro explains. . . . "I just bring Moe to the window and let him look out. Then I say, 'Moe, is it winter or is it summer?' If he is able to distinguish, I know he's all right and he gets his drink."

After two years as gunnery officer at a naval air station in England, Lt. Pug Rentner, former star half back at Northwestern university, has returned to the United States and is awaiting a new assignment. . . . Harry Cooper has been installed as new professional at Oahu Country club, Honolulu. . . . In his first 28 games this season Toe Blake of the Montreal Canadiens seemed a cinch to win the Lady Byng trophy, annual National Hockey league award for sportsmanship and gentlemanly behavior. . . . He was leading the league in points and had not served a single penalty. . . . On Jan. 20 Toe ceased to be a candidate for the trophy, emphatically. . . . He drew a two minute penalty, which wouldn't have knocked him out of the running, then went berserk and whacked Winger Ants Atanas, only Greek in the National league, with his hockey stick. . . . He received a match penalty, was fined $100, and indefinitely suspended by President Dutton. . . . Good-by, Lady Byng! . . . Writes Dick Barwegen, captain of the 1944 All-Star football squad: "The day I get my release from the army I'll be on my way back to Purdue, so count me in on that Big Nine championship team of 1945." . . . Golden Gloves entries of 1945 exceed the number in 1944, both in Chicago and New York.

Did You Write to Him?

Did you write that certain letter
To that soldier boy somewhere?
Did you make each line sound cheerful?
Did you end it with a prayer?

Or did you gripe about your troubles,
Zero waves and frozen ears?
Did you rave because your money
All too quickly disappears?

Think of him, and all the others,
In their foxholes, brave and grim,
Then forget your petty troubles
When next time you write to him.

Champaign, Ill., Jan. 26 [Special].—Illinois dealt Iowa its first defeat in 11 basketball games, 43 to 42, tonight before 6,000.

As a result Iowa is tied for the Western conference lead with Ohio State, each with four victories and one defeat, while Illinois claimed third place with three and one.

A basket by Walt Kirk, giving Illinois a 43 to 40 lead with two minutes to play, decided the game. Ned Postels countered with a long shot for Iowa which left the Hawkeyes a point short.

What a Rally!

Iowa led for 26 minutes, its biggest margin being nine points at 20 to 11. Illinois then scored 17 points while holding Iowa to a single field goal and building up a 28 to 22 margin which lasted out the game.

Iowa outscored Illinois from the field, 18 to 15, but the Illini made 13 of 20 free throw chances. In the last 15 minutes, Illinois made nine free throws without a miss. Iowa made only 6 of 15 during the game.

The victory was Illinois' 11th straight over Iowa in George Huff gym. The Hawkeyes have not beaten Illinois here since 1928, when Coaches Lawrence [Pops] Harrison of Iowa and Doug Mills of Illinois were players at their respective schools. Lineups:

Fort Pierce Stars to Join Miami Eleven

Miami, Fla., Jan. 26 (Special).—Officials of the Miami professional football team of the All-America conference today announced that four members of the Fort Pierce naval amphibious training base's undefeated 1944 squad have been signed to contracts and will report upon completion of service with the navy. Previous announcement had stated that the Miami eleven will be coached by Lt. Comdr. John Meagher, who last fall directed the Iowa City Navy Pre-Flight eleven.

The Fort Pierce players signed today are Don Reese, full back, formerly of the University of Missouri; Frank Albert, tackle, Notre Dame; Bill Godwin, center, University of Georgia, and Don Cohenour, former tackle with the University of Texas.

Godwin, in particular, is known nationally in intercollegiate football as he starred in the 1943 Rose bowl game when Georgia defeated U. C. L. A., 9 to 0, and Charles Trippi gained more ground behind the Bulldogs' line than the total credited to all of the U. C. L. A. backs.

Ensign Hampton Pool, former Chicago Bears' end and coach of the Fort Pierce eleven last year, previously had signed with Miami as assistant to Lt. Comdr. Meagher.

Hawks Battle Seibert and Wings Twice

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Earl Seibert and Detroit teammates vs. the new Blackhawks will be the dish served to the Detroit hockey fans for the first time tonight, and tomorrow night there will be an encore in Chicago Stadium. Tonight's occasion will be the first time Seibert has played against the Hawks since the Hawks bought him from the Rangers nine years ago.

Since the Hawks traded their captain to the wings for Cully Simon, Don Grosso, and Butch McDonald, Seibert has played in eight National Hockey league games, of which his team has won five, lost two, and tied one. Earl has scored four goals and four assists in those eight games.

Since joining the Hawks, Simon has not scored any points, partly because of the nature of his defense assignment. Grosso has scored three goals and two assists, and McDonald has scored two goals and two assists.

HOWE OUT TWO WEEKS.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 26 (AP).—Syd Howe, veteran center and leading scorer of the Detroit Red Wings Hockey club, will be out of action for two weeks with an ear infection, Dr. C. L. Tomsu, club physician, told Manager Jack Adams today.

YANKEES SOLD TO SYNDICATE FOR $2,800,000

paper publisher, were among those mentioned.

MacPhail, who was a captain in World War I., has been an aid to Under-Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson since he reentered the service in September, 1942.

It Will Take Time.

Asked if he thought he had a bargain, MacPhail, who formerly was general manager of the Cincinnati and president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, replied, "Well we got a good ball club. Only eight or 10 years can tell if we got a bargain.

"Barrow and Weiss have lifetime jobs as far as I am concerned," MacPhail added. "I expect Barrow to stay on as long as he wants to and take full charge of everything, at least until I am out of uniform. I expect him to continue at least as long as his health permits as chairman of the board of directors."

Topping Owns Football Club.

Captain Topping of the marines, who also owns the Brooklyn Tigers of the National Football league, was not present at the meeting.

Asked if his participation in a baseball deal while in close touch with the Washington situation had given rise to any optimism of baseball's continuance in 1945, MacPhail remarked, "Not necessarily so. Not until some of the stigma that was undeservedly put on a man in a baseball uniform is removed. Maybe we might better have an explanation of what they are doing with some of the 1-As before we worry about the 4-Fs."

Farm System to Go On.

The new regime pledged itself to continuing the farm system operation that has reaped such great profits to the Yankees since 1932.

The cash paid to the Manufacturers Trust company will form a lifetime income for the three women to whom Ruppert willed the club more than six years ago, Mrs. Joseph Halloran and Mrs. J. Basil Maguire, his nieces, and Miss Helen W. Weyant, a friend. Miss Weyant's brother, Rex Weyant, will continue as traveling secretary.

Among the almost 400 players who changed hands in the deal were Joe Di Maggio, Charley Killer, Red Ruffing, Joe Gordon, Spurgeon Chandler, and Phil Rizzuto, now in service, and the 39 active Yankees to whom Barrow mailed contracts 10 days ago.

Last year the farm system, which included 15 links in pre-war days, had shrunk to five clubs.

Win 14 League Titles.

Altho the Yankees' stock did not rise until 1921 when they won their first pennant, they eventually became baseball's most powerful aggregation, capturing 14 pennants and 10 world championships, both records for the majors. Four of the championships, from 1936 thru 1939, were in succession, the only team ever to accomplish this feat.

EXPECT SHAW TO ACCEPT U. C. L. A. COACHING BERTH

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 26 (AP).—Lawrence T. [Buck] Shaw, former Notre Dame football star, most likely will be the new head football coach at the University of California at Los Angeles provided he can arrive at a satisfactory agreement with present business affiliates.

The former Santa Clara coach, with a brilliant record behind him, tentatively has been offered the U. C. L. A. berth, to succeed Edwin [Babe] Horrell, resigned, the Associated Press learned today. A long term contract is in the offing.

Webb's Story Right Out of Horatio Alger

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 26 (AP).—Del E. Webb, wealthy Phoenix contractor, one of the new owners of the New York Yankee baseball club, is the hero of a typically American success story.

Twenty years ago he was a pitcher for the Oakland club of the Pacific coast league. Never destined to become a major league star, he finally dropped out of professional baseball. As late as 16 years ago—in 1929—he worked as a finishing carpenter.

As one of his stanch friends, Arthur Nehf, a former star southpaw of the New York Giants and Chicago Cubs, puts it:

"He came to Phoenix without a dime and parlayed a saw and a hammer into a million dollars."

He's a Fair Golfer.

Tall, slender, bespectacled and soft-spoken, Webb always has retained his youthful enthusiasm for baseball, but in late years his principal sports recreation has been golf. A fair golfer himself— he generally shoots in the 80s—he long has been instrumental in bringing nationally recognized tournaments and players to his home course, the Phoenix Country club.

Starting out as a building contractor in a small way, his ability to get along with people resulted in a rapidly expanding business. When war came, his Del E. Webb Construction company already was one of the largest and busiest in the southwest.

Friends Are Dubious.

Some months ago friends learned that he had invested in a movie production company, headed by one of his golfing pals, movie actor Bing Crosby. But when the news leaked out that he also had become associated with Col. Larry MacPhail and Capt. Dan Topping in a deal for purchase of the Yankees, some of the more skeptical of his acquaintances refused to believe it.

Just Like an Alger Story.

"It doesn't make sense," they scoffed. "Why that's the richest club in baseball." What they forgot was that baseball was his first love and that now he has a chance to realize the frustrated ambition of his youth—to become a major leaguer.

So today, when announcement of the deal was made in New York, the one-time minor league pitcher finally made the grade—about 20 years late and not as a player in the park that Ruth built, but as one of the owners.

SFA PUTS FREEZE ON USE OF COAL IN SPORT ARENAS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26 (AP).—Such war time indoor sports as basketball, hockey, bowling, and boxing apparently were frozen out temporarily today in 16 states and three specific localities.

The solid fuels administration announced further restrictions on the use of coal in states east and south of the Great Lakes, due to a jam of winter struck freight traffic.

The announcement urged curtailment or elimination of the use of coal in places of amusement and becomes effective Sunday until further notice.

May Be Local Exemptions.

While only bowling alleys in the sports category were mentioned specifically, it later was explained that the limitations apply also to basketball games, fights, track meets, hockey, ice carnivals, and so on until the emergency passes.

The only exceptions will be where local supplies are sufficient to permit sports events to continue without danger of running out of fuel.

"It's purely a matter of judgment on the part of local officials," an SFA source said, "but the order certainly applies to other indoor sports as well as bowling."

Suggest Events Be Postponed.

Such contests might be postponed until restrictions are lifted, or canceled, it was suggested. It may be a week or more before the pinch is felt in some communities.

When MacPhail went to Brooklyn, there was a sort of attic over the rotunda that forms the main entrance to Ebbets field. It was littered and dirty. The MacPhail magic went to work. In no time at all it was transformed into a veritable chrome nickled night club with a snack and liquid refreshments available whenever the hungry or thirsty might show up. "This place," said MacPhail to the newspapermen, "is for your use." It remains a popular after-the-game spot even under the reign of the sedate Branch Rickey, now the Dodger president.

When MacPhail departed the Dodgers two years ago, he did it in typical unorthodox fashion. He invited all the baseball writers to attend a meeting of the club directors, but he didn't reveal his intentions. The directors were sort of aghast when they saw the writers flock in to be greeted by MacPhail as if they were business associates. Then MacPhail, with tears rolling down his cheeks, made his resignation speech. Subsequently he went into the army, in which he served overseas in '18, one of his schemes at that time involving kidnapping the kaiser. He didn't get the kaiser but he did come back with an ash tray as a souvenir.

The fiery red head is death on slovenly umpiring, of which the American league umpires may have heard. He has been known to harangue an umpire from beneath the stand during a game. He has even gone into the dugout to pour on his verbal assault. Once he invited the newspapermen to the Dodgers' clubhouse so they could hear him deliver a tirade to the players, whom he suspected weren't bearing down. But while these may be termed faults, he drew the people thru the turnstiles and that's what counts.

Tied for third place were Tex Consolver of Wichita and Frank Stranahan, amateur from Maxwell field, Ala., each with a 68.

WAUKEGAN AND MORTON HEAVIES SCORE VICTORIES

BY DAVID CONDON.

Waukegan and Morton continued in their tie for the Suburban league heavyweight basketball lead with victories last night. Each has won five of six games played this season.

Waukegan turned in a double victory over New Trier. The heavyweights won, 38 to 33, after trailing, 12 to 11, at the end of the first period. By half time, the Waukegan five had moved into a one point lead, 22 to 21, and led by four points, 27 to 23, at the end of the third period. The Waukegan juniors won, 21 to 17.

Morton's quintet had little trouble in downing Proviso, 46 to 32, after the Proviso juniors had defeated Morton, 28 to 18, in the first game.

Waukegan was paced by Dave Allen, who scored 21 points, while Dick Bauman and Bill Shaw led the Morton scorers with 10 points each.

In the third senior game, Evanston defeated Oak Park, 40 to 35.

There were no games played in the West Suburban conference.

In the South Suburban race, Kankakee won its eight straight victory by defeating Calumet City, 39 to 34, to continue in the league lead. Elsewhere in league play Lockport's seniors beat Bloom, 41 to 39, and Thornton routed Argo, 59 to 31.

LEO RALLIES TO DEFEAT JOLIET SENIORS, 24 TO 21

Leo's Lions came from behind and held the Joliet Catholic basketball team scoreless in the second half to deal Joliet its first defeat of the season in the south section of the Catholic league, 24 to 21, last night. The Joliet five led, 21 to 8, at the end of the half, but failed to score a single point in the final two quarters.

In the north section, Fenwick maintained its undefeated record by defating St. Mel, 44 to 38, for its fourth straight.

St. George routed De Paul, 57 to 34, in the other north section contest.

Elsewhere in the south section, Loyola beat De La Salle, 32 to 27, after De La Salle had held a 13 to 11 lead at the half, while Mount Carmel beat Weber, 42 to 35.

The postponement of the St. Ignatius-St. Philip double header kept both undefeated north section junior quintets idle. St. Mel defeated Fenwick, 21 to 15, and De Paul beat St. George, 46 to 32, in other north section games. Both victorious quintets had substantial leads at half time.

REALTORS URGE U. S. TO VACATE HOUSING FIELD

End of Rent Control Also Sought.

BY AL CHASE.

Directors of the National Association of Real Estate Boards yesterday went on record in a policy statement urging disposal of all present public housing projects to private interests, no more publicly owned residential developments, rebuilding of blighted areas wholly by private enterprise, proper housing for Negroes, and better planning of subdivisions and neighborhoods.

Van Holt Garrett, who is slated to head realtors.

The realtors, who met in the Drake hotel, also asserted that federal rent control should be removed as soon as local conditions permit and that no government control should be placed on commercial rentals. They suggested that the government make payments on federally owned properties to local governments to compensate for losses in taxes or the cost of municipal services.

Broad Local Power Urged.

"Local government should be encouraged and assisted in developing methods for the clearance of slums and the rebuilding of blighted areas," the realtors' statement read.

"To this end broader power should be granted to local government for the purpose of securing and assembling land thru tax foreclosures and thru powers of eminent domain [condemnation] where such action will eliminate slums and blighted areas.

"Rebuilding for private use in such areas should be done wholly by private enterprise and always in accordance with a community or city plan which has been approved by the governing body. In this way we may assure ourselves that the rebuilding of our cities will be done in accordance with an orderly method.

Government Aid Sought.

"No more publicly owned housing should be built in the post-war period and such public housing projects as are now in existence should be disposed of to private enterprise.

"We recognize the need of aid to many families in our country in order that they may be able to have decent and sanitary housing. This aid should be extended by government to private enterprise which will undertake to supply low rent housing and should consist of some of the advantages which are now enjoyed by public housing.

"Such aids may take the form of more liberal mortgage insurance as well as assistance by local government in land assembly and the provision of public facilities. All such publicly aided private housing should be initiated and regulated locally and administered in coöperation with the welfare agencies in each community."

Federal Policy Held Wasteful.

The federal government should seek to aid private enterprise, not supplant it, the directors said, terming the present policy "wasteful and extravagant."

"The government is daily adding to its own operations technical and business services which better could be performed for it by professional persons and institutions already working in these fields," they asserted.

Van Holt Garrett of Denver, Colo., was nominated for the presidency of the association on the only ticket in the field for the election today. Garrett will succeed John W. Galbreath of Columbus, O.

ASK U. S. TO OPEN DISCUSSIONS FOR FOREIGN CREDITS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26 (AP).—Several foreign governments have asked the United States to begin discussions on long-term post-war credits for reconstruction and development, the state department said today, but refused to identify any country because congressional action would be necessary to make the credits possible.

Russia alone hopes to buy goods estimated at 5 to 10 billion dollars depending on what kind of post-war trade and credit arrangements she can make. The statement was issued in response to a question about discussions of post-war credits with Russia.

Foreign loans cannot be made without removal of the ban against credits to foreign countries in default to the United States. President Roosevelt has asked that the ban be lifted.

GRAIN FUTURES CLIMB ON SHORT ARGENTINE CROP

Grain futures prices rose yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade on reports the Argentine corn crop had been cut by drouth to 100 million bushels, 244 million short of last year, and predictions distillers would have to use 10 per cent or more rye for industrial alcohol.

Corn led the advance and closed ¾ to 2⅝ cents a bushel higher. Other grains were: Rye 1⅝ to 1⅞ cents, wheat 1¼ to 1¾, oats ⅝ to ⅞, and barley ¼ to ⅝.

Argentina normally produces about 300 million bushels of corn and ships a large percentage to Europe. Traders expressed belief that unless rains soon relieve the drouth it may be necessary to export big quantities of United States feed grains to liberated countries.

Submits Plan to Get More Housing Cash

A proposal to attract more capital into the housing projects for middle income families was submitted yesterday to the senate subcommittee on housing by Randolph Bohrer, Chicago real estate operator and attorney.

The proposal of Bohrer, who, with Louis H. Barkhausen owns the Town and Garden apartments and other large properties, calls for shortening of the depreciation period on housing to permit the investor to recover his capital within the first 10 years, compared with the present 30 to 50 years.

Bohrer's plan would have the effect of accumulating an untaxable depreciation reserve over a period of 10 years, which would mean the return to the investor of his capital. Under the present method of depreciation the reserve would be accumulated, for instance, over a period three times as long.

Appeals to Taft.

Bohrer explained his plan in a letter to Sen. Taft [R., O.], chairman of the subcommittee on post-war housing. He said it could be made operative by a simple amendment to the next revenue act, specifying maximum rentals for housing entitled to the higher depreciation rates for income tax purposes.

Asserting that a big reservoir of savings assures ample private funds for well secured mortgages, he said it did not follow that large funds would be as readily available from the owners of risk or equity capital in the creation of tax paying rental housing for the large middle income group.

"First, it is almost certain that such new housing will cost more than housing built before the war with which it will come in competition," he explained.

May Become Obsolete.

"Second, experience suggests that economic maladjustments following the war may cause a high vacancy rate within a few years; and, third, careful investors realize that the great technological advances resulting from the war may soon render obsolete the housing constructed to ease the shortage.

"Present income taxes and those likely to be necessary in the future offer the owner of equity capital no inducement to assume an extraordinary risk, altho he might take a different view if he could anticipate recovery of his capital investment in a relatively short period, say 10 years."

Bohrer said the proposed amendment would not apply to existing housing and the legislation would safeguard the public interest without imposing burdensome restrictions on the investor.

'PENNSY' SHIFTS PASSENGER CARS TO PUSH FREIGHT

The Pennsylvania railroad announced last night the rearrangement of cars on a number of trains, effective at 12:01 a. m. Monday, to release some passenger locomotives for duty in relieving the freight tie-up caused by severe weather in the east. Cars will be taken off some longer trains and added to shorter trains, to make no train longer than 11 cars, eliminate "double headers," and free the extra locomotives.

The rearrangement was expected to be temporary. Its principal effect on the public will be some changes in time of traveling on the shifted cars. No change is made in Chicago departure times of trains to the east.

Among the changes are: The Manhattan Limited leaving Chicago at 11:30 a. m. for New York will be reduced from two sections to one—all coach. Its four sleepers will be placed on the Admiral leaving at 1:30 p. m. The Admiral will become a solid sleeper train, with its coaches added to the General leaving at 2:30 p. m. The Liberty Limited's first section to Baltimore and Washington will carry three coaches now on the Trail Blazer, leaving at 3:30 p. m. Other changes will be of a like nature.

BRITAIN RELAXES CONTROLS OVER SURPLUS TOOLS

LONDON, Jan. 26 (AP).—Quick relaxation of government control over about 12 million dollars of surplus machine tools and machines—apparently in a move toward conversion for civilian use—was announced officially today by the ministry of supply. The order, effective Feb. 1, would "facilitate reëquipment of engineering industries."

Comprehensive control of machine tool purchases would be replaced by selective control, a ministry spokesman said. Specifically, the order will abolish the need for a purchase certificate.

HARVESTER RECEIVES 45 MILLION DOLLAR SHERMAN TANK ORDER

International Harvester company has been awarded a 45 million dollar contract by the war department to build medium tanks of the 30 ton Gen. Sherman type, Col. John Slezak, chief of the Chicago ordnance district, announced yesterday. Production is expected to start by June at the Quad-Cities tank arsenal, Bettendorf, Ia.

The Bettendorf plant originally was assigned to building light tanks, but because of changing military requirements the Harvester company's 217 million dollar order to build them was terminated in March, 1943, before full production had been reached. This was the first major war contract terminated.

The contract was ended in July, 1944, for $25,300,000. Harvester will continue to produce the M-5 high speed artillery prime mover and to rebuild Gen. Sherman tanks at the Bettendorf plant until production of new tanks is started.

Foote Reports Record Sales, Larger Profit

Sales of the Chicago manufacturer in its fiscal year ended Oct. 31 swelled to $45,683,391 from $26,284,943 in the preceding year, William A. Barr, president, told stockholders. Production expanded to the highest level in company history.

Backlog Cut, May Rebound.

Contract cancellations in the year aggregated $7,908,361. Unfilled orders on Oct. 31 totaled $23,779,498, compared with $46,377,764 a year earlier. Present negotiations, however, indicate there may be "a sharp upward turn in our backlog within the next few months," said Barr.

Net income in the year was $834,535, or $3.81 per share, after setting aside $200,000 for contingencies and $1,634,710 for contract renegotiation. Net earnings the preceding year were $671,117, or $3.10 a share, after renegotiation and a $100,000 provision for contingencies.

Plan to Apply War Experience.

Technical production "know-how" resulting from war experience will be applied to improved peace time products, Barr said. Plans are being formulated to concentrate on the company's improved products.

American Steel Foundries reported net profit was $603,064, or 51 cents a share, in the three months ended Dec. 31, first quarter of this fiscal year, compared with $664,795, or 56 cents a share, in the corresponding 1944 quarter. Sales, after provision for renegotiation, were $18,417,365, against $21,512,139 a year earlier.

EFFECT DIVORCE OF RFC, ILLINOIS INDUSTRY ASKS

The Illinois Manufacturers' association yesterday urged in a statement thru James L. Donnelly, executive vice president, senate adoption of the George bill which would reëstablish the Reconstruction Finance corporation and its subsidiary lending corporations as an independent government agency.

"The administration of these federal financial agencies in a capable, nonpartisan manner is of the utmost importance to the successful prosecution of the war as well as to economic stability and full employment in private industry in the post-war period," the statement said.

"We urge the appointment of individuals to administer these federal financial agencies who are not only able to command the confidence of American industry and business, but who also have the confidence themselves in private industry and business."

PULLMAN CLERK, REPAIR GROUPS JOIN TRUST CASE

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 26 (AP).—Two more groups of Pullman company employes today were authorized to participate in the government's anti-trust suit against the company in federal District court.

The Pullman Car Employes' Association of Repair Shops, Wilmington, Del., with 3,500 workers, and Pullman Clerks' association, Chicago, of 3,300 employes, joined the Order of Railway Conductors of America, whose 2,900 Pullman members last week were granted the right to intervene.

The company elected to keep the car manufacturing branch and sell the sleeping car unit after the court directed the disposal of one branch. The employes' groups said they thought their jobs, retirement, and other benefits might be jeopardized.

PLEDGE CANADA LARGER PART IN U.S. AIR TRAFFIC

More Lines Across Border Planned.

BY CHARLES GOTTHART.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 26.—Canadian air lines were promised a larger proportionate share of Canadian-United States air transportation business in an agreement reached today by representatives of the two governments meeting in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel.

Additional routes across the border and into Alaska will be established under the agreement and announced after an exchange of notes incorporating the draft agreements.

Details Not Disclosed.

Altho details of the new routes were not divulged, C. D. Howe, Canadian minister of reconstruction, who headed his government's delegation, said the dominion would be given a larger share of the business than at present.

[In Washington, D. C., authoritative sources commented that the agreement may lead to a change in the United States map of proposed world air transportation service to give Chicago and Detroit direct routes to Europe. A civil aeronautics board map issued in June and revised for the world air parley in Chicago omitted Canada. It was suggested that this was deliberate in order to offer a bargaining point when rights for a direct route from Chicago to Europe using Canadian bases for fueling was sought.]

United States air lines operate eight of the nine existing routes across the border, the Trans-Canada Airlines, owned by the Canadian government, flying the route between Toronto, Ont., and New York City.

Expects Improved Services.

Howe said that altho Canadian lines were short of equipment, in common with United States companies, better service may be established before additional planes are made available.

Edward P. Warner, vice chairman of the civil aeronautics board, Washington, D. C., said that no limitations were placed on the number of flights to be made over the new routes agreed upon. In addition to continuing existing routes, the agreement provides for further routes as determined by future requirements of the two countries.

It was also announced that Montreal, Canada had been agreed upon as the location for the international civil aviation organization to be established under terms of a world conference held in Chicago last year.

Howe also announced formally that Canada had decided to adhere to the international air services transit agreement set up in Chicago, involving two "air freedoms"—the right to pass over territory of other signatory governments without stopping for passengers, and the right to make stops for service and mechanical purposes.

Warner said that about 30 countries had signed the agreement involving the two freedoms.

Action by Newfoundland.

Trans-Atlantic and trans-Pacific aviation operations were discussed at the conference, but were not part of the official agenda. Neither, Howe explained, was the recent action of Newfoundland in recommending rescinding of Britain's exclusive right to use of air facilities there on the shortest air route to Europe.

Butter Base Price, Subsidy Hike Asked to Lift Production

A committee representing three dairy products associations yesterday sent telegrams to government food and pricing agencies urging them to increase the base price of butter and raise the production payment for butterfat sold for butter to relieve the "butter crisis."

The telegrams, dispatched on behalf of the American Butter institute, the National Coöperative Milk Producers' association, and the National Creameries association, went to War Mobilizer Byrnes, Economic Stabilizer Vinson, and officials of the office of price administration and the war food administration.

Ask 6 Cent Increase.

The message advocated a 6 cent a pound increase in the base price of butter and a substantial increase in the production payment for butterfat sold for butter to "encourage, not discourage butter production."

The committee said that in most areas the production payment on a pound of butterfat sold as cream is approximately one-sixth of the production payment for 100 pounds of whole milk. It recommended raising this payment to at least one-fourth of the whole milk payment.

Production Is 'Discouraged.'

Dr. H. A. Ruhe, institute secretary, said present government policies "discourage" production and that the loss in butter output last year was 322 million pounds, compared with 287 million pounds taken for the army, navy, and lend-lease.

Owen M. Richards, manager of the American Dairy association, said: "Millions find it difficult to understand why they are being deprived of so much butter when milk production is highest in history." He said the butter being "allocated to civilians this year will provide only about two ounces per person per week, less than a pat of butter a day."

RECOVERY PUSH SWEEPS STOCK MARKET HIGHER

Steels, Rails Lead Broad Upturn.

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—The stock market, led by steels and rails, today extended Thursday's recovery move with gains of fractions to more than two points. The direction was upward from the start, but the pace quickened after midday and, altho the day's highs were trimmed in many cases, favorites closed at or near the tops.

Customers reinstated sold-out commitments on the belief the recent reaction had been overdone even tho the Nazis should suddenly collapse and throw reconversion problems into industry's lap. Dividends and earnings reports helped. Many traders, however, remained cautious pending farther developments on the Russian front.

Average Rises Half Point.

The Associated Press 60 stock average was up 0.5 at 58.7, only 1.2 points under the seven year peaks of December and early January. Of 935 issues traded, 613 advanced, 131 declined, and 191 were unchanged. Transfers were 1,254,730 shares compared with 973,890 yesterday.

Bethlehem Steel rose 2¼ points on the favorable 1944 financial statement. In front were United States Steel, Santa Fe, New York Central, Great Northern, Delaware and Hudson, Chrysler, General Motors, American Telephone, Dome Mines, Goodrich, Sears Roebuck, Douglas Air-

How'd you like to own a "Flying Jeep" after the war?

1. The Army nicknamed this amazing plane the "Flying Jeep." It can take off and land almost "on a dime." They use it for many jobs: as the "eyes upstairs" for artillery units . . . for laying Signal Corps wire over jungle and impassable terrain . . . and for photo and reconnaissance work. It has even hovered over battling tanks in Burma, observing and directing the conflict from the air.

2. When the Army wanted a flying ambulance to evacuate casualties from small jungle clearings and inaccessible battle zones, the versatile "Flying Jeep" took on this job, too. Many a wounded American boy is alive and well today because this tiny Consolidated Vultee plane speeded him to the base hospital in minutes, instead of the hours it would have taken stretcher bearers to make the arduous trip.

3. Your postwar "Flying Jeep" may not look exactly like this. But you can be certain it will be safe, easy to fly, and an economical family plane. Well suited, too, for vacations, inter-city travel, for aero clubs and "Fly-it-Yourself" stations . . . for farmers, sowing and dusting crops . . . for forest patrol and fire spotting . . . for policing and traffic control . . . and for survey work . . . an ideal all-purpose small plane.

Don't miss it! MOSS HART'S Winged Victory

4. The Axis didn't think that America, so unprepared, could produce so much, so fast. If they ever start another war, they will not forget their fatal error. They will know that to win, they must knock out the United States first.

But they will not be apt to start another war if we keep America strong, invincible.

The mere fact that we possess and maintain a powerful Army, Navy, and Air Force will discourage such attacks as we suffered at Pearl Harbor.

For Air Power is one of our best guarantees of a lasting peace in a world where vengeful sparks of aggression may still be smoldering a generation hence.

CIO UNIT FLAYS VINSON FOR BAR TO WLB RULINGS

Packinghouse Workers Call Parley on Delay.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26 (AP).—Lewis J. Clark, president of the CIO Packinghouse Workers, today accused Economic Stabilizer Vinson of "changing the rules in the middle of the game" in dealing with wage disputes.

He summoned a meeting of his executive board in Chicago after writing Vinson that union officials had reached the end of their patience in waiting for a decision in their case before the war labor board. Clark emphasized that no threat of a strike was involved.

Report Tool Allowances.

The WLB reportedly has reached a decision in the packinghouse case, but has delayed announcing it—as in the textile case—because of a letter from Vinson which requested that future wage decisions be submitted to the office of price administration for a review of their possible effect on prices.

Among other things, the decision was understood to provide for the first time allowances for clothing and tools employes required in their jobs. It also was said to call for commissions to cover plant inequalities and to increase the guaranteed work week in the industry from 32 to 36 hours.

Involving approximately 100,000 employes of Armour, Swift, Cudahy, Wilson, and John Morrell, the case began with negotiations in August, 1943. It went before the WLB national meat panel, piling up a transcript of 6,000 pages of testimony before finally reaching the board itself early in December.

Charges WLB Is Blocked.

"In other words," Clark wrote Vinson, "after 17½ months of patient waiting, constant and increasing production, the packinghouse workers of the nation looked forward to the final disposition of their case.

"We now understand that the national war labor board is unable to issue its decision on the merits of the case . . . because of a change of the rules in the middle of the game—a change which you have made.

"I trust you will remove the blocks that you have placed in the road of the war labor board's activities and permit them to proceed immediately toward a final disposition."

BIG DAMAGE SUIT IS FILED AGAINST INT. PAPER CO.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 26 (AP).—A civil action seeking damages of 96 million dollars plus interest and costs, from Old Colony Trust company, trustee of International Paper and Power company under a declaration of trust, and International Paper company, was filed in federal District court by a trustee of the International Hydro-Electric system.

Atty. Bartholomew A. Brickley, trustee for Hydro-Electric, said: "This is a suit growing out of two transactions. The first was the sale in 1929 to Hydro-Electric of New England Power association stock having a value of approximately 62 million dollars; the second, the sale in 1932 of water power by International Paper to some Hydro-Electric subsidiaries at a cost of $31,700,000. The bill seeks to have both these transactions set aside or damages awarded to Hydro-Electric in lieu thereof."

BRIGGS & STRATTON.

Please inform me what the prospects are for resumption of dividends by Briggs & Stratton corporation. What is its earnings record?—K. E.

The failure of the company's directors to declare the quarterly dividend ordinarily payable Dec. 15 was attributed officially to the effects of war contract renegotiation and war time uncertainties. C. L. Coughlin, president, said later that it was the management's hope and belief that dividend payments could be resumed as of next March 15.

On Dec. 29 the company announced that as a result of renegotiation proceedings relating to 1943 business, it had agreed to refund to the government $1,910,000, less federal tax credit. The agreement, by removing uncertainty in this respect, is believed to have cleared the way for renewed consideration of dividends. The adjusted 1943 profit is equal to $2.94 a share on the 297,149 shares, compared with $4.08 previously reported.

Dividends had been paid each year since 1929, and in no year after 1934 was less than $3 a share distributed until 1944, when payments totaled $2.25.

In the first nine months of 1944, net income before renegotiation was equal to $2.46 a share. For calendar years, share earnings were: 1942, $3.60, after renegotiation adjustment; 1941, $3.89; 1940, $3.50; 1939, $3.18; 1938, $2.16; 1937, $4.29. Current assets at the close of 1943 were $7,155,000; current liabilities, $5,025,000. In normal times Briggs & Stratton makes automotive equipment and portable gasoline engines. Its war production has included gasoline engines and airplane magnetos.
